Summer Jobs

By Elliot Shapiro

Thinking of a job this summer as a waitress on a glamorous ocean liner? According to Mademoiselle's May issue, you had better lower your sights to something on the lake and river line.

Most jobs as ship-board waitresses and maids, the article says, will go to union members this summer. Some steamship lines report that they have as many as ten applications for every job. And so, advises the magazine, if you are bent on a life on the bounding main this summer, investigate some of the steamship lines that ply the Great Lakes and many of the larger rivers in the country.

One address given is The Wisconsin and Michigan Line, 315 N. Plankinton Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

Or perhaps you're a landlubber like us, and would prefer to do your waitressing on terra firma.

Summer Resorts

In that case summer resorts and hotels are the answer. For girls with no experience at all there are jobs as maids (making beds, mostly), clerks in hotel stores and souvenir shops. Or if you have had more experience along lines such as stenography and bookkeeping, you could get a job doing that at a summer hotel.

The most common job that is available is waitress. A representative figure on wages is about ten dollars a week plus room and board and tips. And any waitress can make $300 a season in tips, says Mademoiselle.

If you like children, and have had experience with them, many hotels may employ you as a children's supervisor.
