In the race for IFC vice-president, six candidates were named. John Berlin, Richard Charles, George Cleveland, William Hollenbach, Robert Koser and Leon Rothberg comprise the list.

Liberal Arts Council Plans Rating Scale For Teachers, Courses

Improvement of teaching standards and course presentation in the LA School is the aim of a new Teacher-Course Rating Plan completed last week by the Liberal Arts Student Council.

Beginning next week, the Council will make available rating sheets to every teacher who desires them, Fred Kecker, president of the Council said. The scale will be passed out by the instructor in his classes for comments and rating of the course and his teaching by the pupils.

Questions will be answered by checking a scale, the identity of the student being concealed. Results will only be known by the teacher concerned, although some departments may tabulate the information, Kecker said.

The Council committee in charge of the plan is: Jean Moore and Jack Trumbauer, co-chairmen; Paul Andrews, Natalie Biederman, and Bob Kranich.

The Council will collect the papers and turn them over to the teachers. If any tabulation of results is to be made, it is up to the department head. The responsibility of the Council ends when the papers leave their hands, Mr. Kecker emphasized.

The Council was aided in devising the scale by Dr. Kinsley R. Smith, professor of psychology, and Dr. Palmer C. Weaver, professor of education. Professor Robert Bernreuter's Rating Sheet for College Instructors and the Michigan State College Teacher Rating Scale were used in making the new scale.

Chem Society

A faculty-student mixer will be held at the Liebig Chemical Society meeting in the Delta Theta Sigma house, 7:30 o'clock tonight.
