

College Centralizes Foods For Economy, Efficiency

Because big business demands big supplies, erection of a foods building has become a very necessary step if the dining halls are to be able to purchase food economically and with less effort, said Harold W. Loman, purchasing agent and dining commons director, recently.

The College dining rooms now serve 2,000 students three meals a day, and this total will be greatly increased when the four new dining halls are completed, he said.

Approximately 75,000 different food items are purchased by the College. These items are stored in different buildings, and require separate staffs to manage them under the present system.

Carload Buying

Instead of buying in small quantities, the College will economize by buying in carload lots, Loman said.

The new building, which will be located near the Bellefonte-Central Railroad siding, will have a laboratory where samples from manufacturers will be tested before any purchases are made, and also samples from the stock received will be tested. Such testing is now done in a scattered way, added Loman.

To avoid congestion in drive-ways, small trucks will be used to deliver the food to the dining halls from the foods building. Daily delivery of baked goods is contemplated, said Loman, but deliveries of meat will be less often since it can be stored in the separate dining hall refrigerators.

Home-Style Cooking

"We have always tried to get as close to home-style cooking as possible in our dining commons, and for this reason we rejected the idea of cooking the food in the foods building," he said. "Another reason this plan was not adopted," he continued, "was that a blizzard might make transporting every meal difficult."

At present it is not planned to freeze food in the building, but the refrigerators will keep food

WRA Swimmers Stage Aquacade

"Waltz Time," WRA Swimming Club's annual aquacade, will be presented in the White Hall pool at 8 o'clock Thursday and Friday night. Thirty-two coeds will take part in the whole aquacade, twenty-six appearing in the grand finale.

Included in the eight routines scheduled are a Siamese number performed by five couples and a duet by Jackie Zivic and Judy Kline. This program will be the thir aquacade. Miss Marian Whalen, swimming instructor, has directed since she came to State College.

A limited number of tickets may be obtained from members of the aquacade.

The script for "Waltz Time", the story of Johanne Strauss' life, was written by Mickey Barnett. Claire Parks will narrate. All routines were arranged by Nan James and Miss Barnett.

The scenery, depicting Viennese Waltzers, extends the length of the pool. Susan Potter who arranged last year's scenery, is handling this year's set also. Special lighting effects will be managed by means of spots and underpool lighting.

Modern Dance Club

The Modern Dance Club will not meet at 7 o'clock tonight, as previously planned.

already frozen at five degrees below zero.

No one on the present dining commons staff will lose his job under this new system, but it will not be necessary to hire as many persons to work in the new dining halls to be built, he said.

New York Photographers Seek 1947 Photogenic Girl

Photographers are searching for new attractive types of American girls to become tomorrow's models. The Society of Photographic Illustrators recently announced its 1947 National Photogenic Girl contest.

The contest, according to Anton Bruehl, president of the Society, is open to any girl in the country between the ages of 17 and 25. Entrants must use a standard application form available from the Society, 460 Lexington Ave., New York.

Forty member photographers will judge the contest on June 16. Accompanying the application must be a full length snapshot or photograph. In order to qualify for the competition, girls must agree to remain in New York for one year after winning the contest.

The first prize winner will receive a guarantee of $5000 in model fees for the first year. The four runners-up will receive similar guarantees of $4000, $3000, $2000 and $1000.
