Sugar Bowl Bid

Penn State has again been confronted with racial discrimination in intercollegiate athletics, and has again made an unequivocal decision to compete only under circumstances which will permit the playing of any or all members of its athletic teams.

The decision reached by the Athletic Advisory Board to decline the Sugar Bowl invita-tion tendered the Lion boxing team is especially commendable since there are no Negro boxers on the squad at present.

When the football game with the University of Miami was cancelled last November, Penn State had two Negro players on the squad.

The present decision on the Sugar Bowl invitation indicates, however, that the College will not tolerate any form of discrimination or restrictions tolerate any form of discrimination or restrictions of participants in its athletic program.

Boxing captain Jackie Tighe, who is also a member of the Athletic Board, is to be especially commended for his unselfish attitude. Although he wanted very much to participate in the tournament, he voted to decline the invitation after hearing that the Sugar Bowl committee "understood that no Negroes will be members of the State College team."

Tighe, as well as the other members of the beard, felt that the presence of Negroes on the squad should have no bearing on the decision. The main goint was that the invitation attempted to place restrictions on who could be members of the Lion boxing squad.

There is also the possibility that Negro boxers who might come to the campus in September would be discouraged from trying out for the squad.

As one Collegian reader said in a letter to the editor at the time of the Miami controversy, "there is no room for discrimination on any American sporting field."

Women, Geese, and Skirts

TO THE EDITOR: I read with interest your article on the lengthening of women's skirts. May I add my voice to the storm of protest.

Why don't the girls awaken to the fact that the whole thing is but a plan of the clothing manufacturers to sell new dresses. For a long time women's dress designers have had to bat their brains out to think up some new style to transcript. think up some new style to trap our womanhood into buying more dresses than they need.

Now, obviously, they have come to the end of their ingenuity for they have resorted to lengthening the skirt. This makes it impossible for a girl to alter her present dresses and she must purchase an
