

With the Editor

Last semester Collegian demanded that the hat societies justify their existence or disband. New members were urged to reinstate programs of service to the College and the student body.

The members of the black-hat honoraries are tapped supposedly because they are outstanding male students on campus. They accept the invitation to join because of the honor and recognition which are granted for outstanding contributions to the welfare of Penn State.

If these attributes as prerequisites for membership are still enforced, then by their very nature and composition, these societies are capable of performing a great many services to Penn State.

Collegian suggested a number of programs of action which are well within the scope of the honoraries. One of them was the important service of conducting pep rallies and organizing cheering sections particularly for football games.

Realizing the importance of making their societies working organizations, the presidents of the four leading hat groups have called a mass meeting of all members tonight.

Tonight's meeting will be a significant indication of the importance of maintaining hat societies at Penn State.

Here We Go

TO THE EDITOR: We protest! We understood that sophomore girls were not to be initiated when they came on campus this year. Why, then, were they required to wear their grandmothers' dresses?

Confused,
Joseph W. Ritz, Ralph Leonard

Pen Pals Wanted

TO THE EDITOR: After having established an International Correspondence Bureau, I—on behalf of members on my waiting list—take leave to apply to you. May I request to put me in touch with readers of your paper interested in friendly correspondence?

Having been secluded from the outside world these long years, and yearning for a real democratic enlightenment and a personal contact from man to man across borders, my members would only too gladly welcome and answer letters from abroad. Most of my members . . . have a fairly good knowledge of English, but would also be pleased to write in German, if desired. I am sure my members will try and give their pen-friends every satisfaction.

Individuals and groups of persons may communicate with me direct stating their particulars and interests. All letters will be attended to and all applications linked up. If possible, two or three reply coupons should be enclosed to cover expenses, and also—to save time—an introductory letter to future pen-friends over here will be appreciated.

Pen-friendships are a step toward the creation of that international friendship and goodwill that is so essential to understanding and peace, don't you think so?

Yours hopefully,
(Miss) Anna-Maria Braun

An Invitation

Collegian wishes to extend an invitation to its readers to contribute to the Letters To The Editors department, a regular feature of our editorial page.

In accordance with the policy which was set down when the Collegian resumed its daily standing a year ago, all letters will be given the same prominence as the editorials written by staff members.

Your letters will be printed just as they are written provided they contain nothing of a libelous nature. We reserve the right to refrain from printing any letter which is not signed by the writer; however, it is not necessary to print the name if the writer requests that it be withheld.

The Collegian considers this column as the best method of making the paper more representative. Last year hundreds of letters from our readers were printed. Not all of them were complimentary; some took the form of complaints, gripes, suggestions, and others proved extremely informative.

All letters should be addressed to The Editor, Daily Collegian, P. O. Box 261, or left at the Collegian Offices, Carnegie Hall.—LGF

Editorials and features in The Daily Collegian reflect the opinions of the writer. They make no claim to represent student or College opinion. All unsigned editorials are by the editor.

12 Brazilian Educators Take Education Course

Twelve directors of vocational education in Brazil have enrolled for a three month's course in vocational education.

A second group of 12 men will enroll January 15 for a similar course. The plan is sponsored by the Institute of Inter-American Affairs, Washington, D.C.

The visitors representing twelve Brazilian states, and the national capital, Rio de Janeiro, have been shivering since they arrived in Nittany Valley. Though mittens were purchased by all, one member already required hospitalization for a cold.

Reflecting the opinions of many undergraduates, one visitor when asked what he thought of State College, said "It's a good place to study—period."

As soccer is the national Brazilian sport, the Good Neighbors are eagerly waiting to view their first football game Saturday.

WRA

WRA organization meetings for bridge, bowling, badminton, and modern dance clubs will be held in White Hall 7 p.m., Wednesday, according to Lee Ann Wagner, president, Junior Service Board.
