The Spectator Is Back

TO THE EDITOR: Looks as if I'm being forced to draw pictures for Earl C. Supplee, Jr., so that he can get the point of my previous letter.

It isn't my contention, as he portrayed, for the student body to sit back and let the world go as it pleases without trying to make it a better place for them to live.

The theme of my previous letter was the expression of my disgust for the following individuals:

1. Those who make unfounded accusations of the College, students, student organizations, and others without having one iota of an idea what they are talking about. For example: You, Earl Supplee, accused the College of robbing the Nittany Dorm boys of $9900. In my "inane" letter, I pointed out your error, which you conveniently overlooked in your rebuttal to my letter.

I mentioned women's regulations in reference to another letter written to the Collegian (October 24, 1947) lambasting the Dean of Women for imposing restrictions on the girls. As pointed out by the Editor, women's regulations "are written and enforced by the girls themselves . . ." Here, again, the writer knew nothing of what he was talking about.

2. Those who make a cry over something that they have absolutely no control over. Example: Girls' skirts. If the girls like long dresses, that's their business. Of course, if one of those girls happens to be your wife, then you can rightly raise a howl—to your wife.

That, Earl, is what I implied in my letter, but which you failed to see. For this reason, I offer my apology.

In Defense of YPCA

TO THE EDITOR: Last week there appeared in the Collegian a letter by Charles B. Adams in which he accused the YPCA movement in our campus as being communistic.

To "prove" his charges, Mr. Adams argued that YPCA's fight for price controls is communistic. If so, then during the war when we had price controls we were definitely a communistic country. Funny! All along I was under the impression that I was fighting for democracy.

He said also that YPCA's aim to abolish discrimination in our barbershops is just a "front". Well, it may be a "front" to Mr. Adams, because that fits perfectly with his assumption that YPCA is communistic. But I think it is an earnest plea to us all to put an end to a most unfortunate situation. It is a challenge to make democracy live not only in theory but in practice as well. And I know that more will be accomplished by assisting the YPCA in this fight than by going about and attributing William Bensch with treacherous motives.

Mr. Adams would be more convincing if, in labeling the YPCA communistic, he relied less on his imagination and more on real evidence.

open to students to hear the speeches and witness the presentations.

Tickets for the affair—predicted to be the largest in Lion history—are expected to go on sale late this week. Members of the Commerce Club, sponsors of the testimonial will be given first choice with members of the Bellefonte and State College Quarterback Clubs next in line. Any left over will be for sale to faculty members, students and alumni.

Cabinet Corner

By Jo Fox

The complaints of the coeds who suffered at the Sandwich Shop last year have faded, only to be echoed from the Pollock Circle Dining Commons this year. Evidently the administration didn't cure our indigestion, they just transplanted it.

At 7:30 o'clock tonight, a Cabinet investigation committee will meet with Samuel K. Hostetter, treasurer of the College, Harold W. Loman, purchasing agent, and the Pollock Circle dietetic staff. The group when digging for the root of the trouble may find that the wave of malnutrition follows a personal path.

Ted Allen, sophomore president-elect, will be sworn in at the All-College Cabinet meeting at the Nittany Lion Inn, 8 o'clock tomorrow. The meeting follows a banquet given for Cabinet by the Council of Administration.

State party publicity makes us expect big things from Allen. He has been "president of four large organizations for a total of eight years." As an independent from Pollock Circle, perhaps he'll have some new views on the food story.
