European Aid Reduction

WASHINGTON—With final action on short-term aid to Europe in the offing, word got around last night that the government has reduced the estimated cost of the long-term Marshall Plan. Anonymous officials said that the cost of financing European recovery over a four-year period may be reduced by one billion, seven hundred million dollars.

Inflation Blueprint

WASHINGTON—The Administration now has submitted a definite blueprint of action to fight inflation. Legislation was offered by Secretary of Commerce Harriman, asking power to ration meat, gasoline and other commodities as needed. But the Republicans are working on their own plan, largely voluntary, and they have received the Administration program without enthusiasm.

The tickets are priced at 75 cents for tomorrow night's performance and $1 for Friday and Saturday nights.

Hit scenes from past Theatians shows are included in this 50th anniversary revue which will open with an original act. Three of the scenes are taken from the 1931 show "Reely and Truly," a production about Hollywood which was written by Julie Epstein, now a Warner Brothers writer and producer.

Two of the scenes are taken from the 1926 show, "The Kid Himself." Raymond Fortunado and Hillard Madway, assisted by the male chorus, will present the hit tune "I've Been Looking for Someone Like You." Robert Koser, Bea Stern, Lomady, Virginia Gallup, and the Glee Singers will take part in "I'm Just a Rollin' Stone."

Movie Aids Food Collection

In a drive to aid needy families the Common Sense Club is sponsoring a movie for which the admittance fee will be a can of food which will find its way to the table of one of the families to receive help from this program, said Lou Jacobson, president.

The movie to be shown at the Cathaum theater at 10 o'clock Saturday morning is "Wild Bill Hickok Rides," a two hour show, featuring Constance Bennett, Bruce Cabot and Warren William. There will also be a showing of three cartoons.

Approximately 25 to 30 families in the Woodcrest, Millsville, Nittany Mountain, and Circleville areas have been chosen to receive assistance as a result of a survey made by the Public Charities of Pittsburgh. These families repre-

Students Protest College Trustees' Co-op Rejection

A rumble of discontent sounded across campus yesterday when the student body was officially informed of the co-op plan rejection by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees.

Before rejecting the cooperative store plan, the Trustees gave the program a sympathetic hearing, reliable sources said today.

College Should Not Compete

After a lengthy discussion, the board decided that the establishment of such a store would be contrary to the policy of a land-grant college. They believed it inadvisable for a tax-supported institution to sponsor a store which would compete with private enterprises. Though they admired the soundness of the project, the Trustees felt the College should not furnish building space, high heat, and maintenance services for it.

It was pointed out by an authoritative source that the Board fully understood the proposed plan since the Trustees representing agrarian interests were familiar with co-operative principles.

Emory Brown, chairman of the Cabinet-sponsored co-op committee, expressed the hope that student interest in the store would not die. Though realization may not be in the near future, he explained that continued effort will bring the plan closer to fulfillment.

Trustee List

The following list is printed for the benefit of those students who asked the names and addresses of the Trustee Executive Committee.

J. H. Andrews, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia
Kenzie S. Bagshaw, Hollidaysburg
George H. Deike, Braddock avenue, Thomas boulevard, and Meade street, Pittsburgh
Howard J. Lamade, Williamsport
J. L. Mauthe, Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, Youngstown, Ohio
James Milholland, First National Bank, Pittsburgh
Roger W. Rowland, New Castle
George W. Slocum, 111 North Front street, Milton

The full Board of Trustees meets January 24, following the Executive Board meeting the previous day. Brown hopes students can convince the Board to reconsider the co-op plan. Letters from campus organizations requesting such a reconsideration will help keep the project alive, Brown urged. Co-ops exist in many other land-grant colleges, he said.

Druids

Members of Druids are urged to attend a meeting in 415 Old Main at 7 o'clock tonight.

Chi O's Don't Believe There Are Ghosts But Still —

When Kay Badollet tells ghost stories to her Chi Omega sorority sisters now, they may very well believe her.

It seems that Kay was telling ghost stories to some of her sisters at the Chi Omega house after 1 a.m. Sunday. Among the shivering, giggling listeners to tales of things that walk in the night were Elizabeth Fitzgerald, Helen Lewis, Phyllis Peters and Nancy Wilson. Helen and Nancy had been in bed only 20 minutes when they heard scratchings on the front porch right below their room. According to Hoyle, the only thing that was supposed to be on the porch at that hour (3 a.m.) was the new Chi O Christmas tree delivered the morning before by the forestry department.

Maybe it wasn't the ghost stories, but it took Nancy and Helen some time before they got out of bed and looked down at the porch.

When they got to the window, there was nothing to be seen. Nothing, not even the stately, 11-foot evergreen.

Maybe it wasn't ghosts. But Kay and Elizabeth, whose room adjoins the porch, heard nothing all night.

Ghost or no ghost, the girls are unanimous that whoever took their Christmas tree is certainly the meanest person (or hobgoblin) in the world.

Windcrest Explosion Causes Trailer Fire

A flash explosion and resulting fire caused an estimated $50 damage in 713 Windcrest, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Jackson about 10 p.m. Monday.

Mrs. Jackson rescued their eight-week-old baby and ran to neighboring trailer. Manson Bradley, Clarence Moore and Kenneth Uhler extinguished the fire with local fire fighting equipment. Cause of the explosion is unknown.

CORE to Prepare Survey of History, Activities

The Committee on Racial Equality will prepare a history and survey on the procedures of the previous meetings of the organization for all interested student faculty members and townspeople. Dr. William Mather, acting chairman, said Monday night.

Attending the meeting were representatives of the many campus organizations and town religious groups.

Members of CORE appointed to prepare and publish the history and activities of the organization were James Smith and Martin Light.

A nominating committee was appointed to present a list of nominations for permanent officers at the next meeting of the racial equality group on January 5.

Drawing Allocates Cotton Bowl Tickets

Applicants to Receive Tickets, Checks Friday

Cotton Bowl tickets have arrived, said Walter Hosterman, assistant to the graduate manager of athletics, late yesterday. They may be obtained at the AA office Friday morning, he added.

Insufficient time and personnel make it impossible to notify students whose names were drawn in yesterday's lottery. All students who applied for tickets will receive their tickets or their refund check Friday, Mr. Hosterman said.

Students who requested that tickets be mailed to them will get their tickets or their refund checks by that means.

Thomas Lannen, All-College president, suggested to students who have more tickets than they need that they dispose of them to fellow students.

The lottery plan of ticket distribution was necessary to spread 1500 tickets equitably among almost 3000 applicants, student leaders felt.

A plan of reducing all alumni applications for tickets by 50 percent was adopted by the Athletic Association. Student leaders opposed such a plan for the student share of the tickets on the grounds that most student parties were already planned in groups of four.

Students who supervised the drawing were Thomas Lannen, All-College president; Allan Ostar, Daily Collegian editor, and John Tighe, Athletic Association president.

Borden Award of $300 Given to High Ranking Senior Dairy Student

John T. Pence, eighth semester senior from New Bethlehem Star Route, Clarion County, has been named to receive the Borden Award, highest award for dairy students at the College, according to Dr. Martin L. Odland, chairman of the awards committee of the school of agriculture.

The award is $300 in cash, and is presented annually.

Pence, now 41 years old, worked for ten years on his home farm after graduation from high school. He entered the College in 1935 to begin a two-year agricultural course in dairy production. After graduating, he became a tester for the Berks County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, a position which he held for four years. He then entered the Army Air Corps, and upon discharge after three years of service, re-entered the College to complete his education.

Grades from all four school years were considered in making the award.
