Miss Park pointed out that the seminars will be discussion groups, not lectures. Each seminar will have at least one resource leader, but will consist mainly of giving students the chance to air their own opinions.

The seminar schedule follows:

Monday, February 23

11-12 a.m.—"Finding Time for Faith" (Is Sunday Faith Sufficient?) Mildred Winston and James Stoner, 304 Old Main.

4:10-5:10 p.m.—"For Better, Not for Worse" (Men-Women Relations.) Dr. Roy Dickerson, Women's Bldg. Lounge.

"Life's Lost Dimension" (Ultimate Loyalty in Everyday Living.) Chaplain Charles I. Carpenter and Bob James, 304 Old Main.

"Ingredients for a World Mind" (Relevance of Religion to International Affairs.) Rev. Herick Young and Prof. S. K. Patro, Atherton Hall Lounge.

Tuesday, February 24

11-12 a.m.—"Scientific Discovery and Moral Obligation" (Relation of Science, Technology, Philosophy and Religion to the Atomic Era.) Rev. J. Maurice Trimmer, 304 Old Main.

4:10-5:10 p.m.—"For Better—Not for Worse." Dr. Roy Dickerson, Women's Bldg. Lounge.

"The Skeptic's Hour" (What Can an Intelligent Student Believe About Religion?) Rev. Robert James and Rabbi Holtzberg, Atherton Lounge.

"The U.S. and US" (Individual Obligation in National Affairs.) Muriel Jacobson and Rev. Herbert King, 304 Old Main.

Monday's seminars will be repeated at the same hour and place on Wednesday, February 25, with the exception of "For Better—Not for Worse," which will have its second day Tuesday. Tuesday's seminars will be repeated at the same hour and place on Thursday, with the exception of "For Better—Not for Worse."

Miss Park emphasized that repetition of the seminar topic a second

Fishburn, Dunlop Direct All-State Band Concerts

Prof. Hummel Fishburn, music department head, and Prof. James W. Dunlop, director of the Blue Band, are acting as guest conductors at the all-state high school band concerts which started yesterday in Elwood City.

The annual concerts are a function of the Pennsylvania Music Educators Association which selects the outstanding members of high school bands throughout the state to display their talents as a group.

Both Mr. Fishburn and Mr. Dunlop have served as past presidents of the organization. Mr. Fishburn is still a member of the executive committee.

day does not mean that both programs will be alike, for each session will have different discussion of the same topic.

Butler Yeats, and several sets of Shakespeare.

Rare books in the collection are "Progresses of Queen Elizabeth," edited by John Nichols and published in 1788, and a bound collection of playbills for the Walnut Street Theater, Philadelphia, from 1870 to 1872. The volume includes playbills for "Julius Caesar" and "Hamlet," starring Edwin Booth, as well as "East Lynne," and other productions.

The first nine volumes of "The American Mercury" and "Review of English Studies" for the years 1925 to 1944 are included. The now famous story, "Hatrack," by Herbert Asbury, which caused the magazine to be barred from Boston, appears in one of the issues of "The American Mercury."

A special bookplate, designed by Dr. Dye for his collections depicts a frigate with the quotation, "Much have I travel'd in the realms of gold, and many goodly states and kingdoms seen," taken from John Keats' "On First Looking Into Chapman's Homer."
