TO THE STUDENTS AND FACULTY OF PENN STATE:

... With Liberty and Justice for All."

These words, of course, are the thrilling last words of the "Pledge of Allegiance." There probably isn't a person on campus who cannot recite the "Pledge." At the same time, we have a situation in our own community—right now—that does NOT provide justice for all.

We refer to the fact that Negro students cannot secure haircuts in State College barber shops.

What, then, are we going to do about our recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance? Are we going to mean what it says, or are we going to amend it to read, "... With liberty and justice for all, EXCEPT Negroes"?

Democracy demands vigilance. Our forefathers had to fight to get it, and now we in turn have to fight to keep it. Does your democracy end with mere lip service?
