Straw Vote For New Shop Guides CORE

Student sentiment is for the establishment of a new non-discriminatory barber shop downtown, according to an advisory vote by almost 50 persons at a CORE meeting last night.

After a lengthy discussion a straw vote showed that 28 favored a new shop with a withholding of patronage from existing shops. Nineteen present favored a new non-discriminatory shop alone.

The shop it was averred would be second to none in town, in facilities, location, or personnel. The location would be in the Gregory building on the second floor.

The suggestion was made that tickets worth 25c on each of four haircuts be sold, to indicate how many students would be willing to support the shop.

IFC Makes Survey

Willard Agnew offered to make a survey among the members of IFC to see how many of them would support the new shop with or without suspension of patronage. He also suggested that the presidents of Pollock Circle and Nittany Dorms do the same.

A suggestion was also made that CORE organize a corporation to actually own the shop and employ the barber, so that no question could arise in the new shop about discrimination.

Action had tentatively been postponed until next week at press time.

Stassen May Cancel Community Forum Speech

Scheduled appearance of Harold E. Stassen in the Community Forum lecture series is in doubt, due to the pressure of his presidential campaign, said Bruce V. Moore, general program chairman, today.

Mr. Stassen has not officially broken his contract to address the Forum audience, but the inability of the program committee to get a date commitment is an indication that a cancellation may be expected. He has cancelled most of his engagements at other colleges and universities.

Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, and special consultant to the American Broadcasting System on world affairs, scheduled to speak in Schwab Auditorium March 22, is the fourth speaker in the lecture series. His subject is "Don't Resign from the Human Race."

The 1947-48 series will include seven events if Mr. Stassen keeps his engagements. Actress-producer Margaret Webster will appear April 15, and another event which has not yet been announced.

'Hotdoggers' Crowd TUB Morning, Noon and Night

By Jo Fox

Saturday isn't the only Tub day in the week.

The Temporary Union Building, opened two weeks ago today, serves as a background for a cross-section of Penn State life. The young and the young at heart congregate around the soda bar, loll before the attractive stone fireplace in the lounge, and circle the slippery ball room floor.

George Donovan, student union manager, beams gleefully as he reports that business is getting better every day.

"We're drawing a crowd in the morning. And the building is packed until the doors close in the evening.

A mental photograph of the TUB yesterday found a married couple dancing to "How Soon" in pre-marital dreaminess, while in a corner, sprawling on a table,

Henszey, contractor, will represent the building industry; Jerome Weinstein, editor of the Centre Daily Times, will give the point of view of the general public, and Scott Keyes, housing economist, will speak as a housing authority.

AVC is sponsoring the discussion in an effort to bring to the surface some of the knotty problems of housing and possible solutions.

Senate Passes Coed Permits For Next Fall

Blanket permissions for coeds have been passed by WSGA Senate and will go into effect next Fall pending approval by the College lawyer.

The new system of out-of-town permission, as suggested by the Senate and the Coed Coordinating Committee, will use postcards to notify the parents of the coed's departure from campus for destinations other than home.

Two statements in triplicate accompanied by a letter of explanation will be sent to the parents of all women students. One statement will signify that the parents have reached an understanding with their daughter about the new permission and agree to it.

The other states that the parents do not wish their daughter to have blanket permission and prefer to retain the old method whereby special permission from home must be received by the hostess before a coed may sign out for over night at any place other than home.

One of the triplicate forms will be kept by the parents. The other two will be returned to the College where one will be filed in Dean of Women's office and the other with the coed's hostess.
