Southern Revolt

WASHINGTON—South Carolina Democrat Mendel Rivers called the President "a dead bird" yesterday and urged GOP congressmen to drop their support of the Truman Civil Rights Program if they want to make friends with the South.

The House Judiciary Committee had approved a federal anti-lynching bill and seven senators had gone on record for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission.

U.M.T. Bill

WASHINGTON—Six senators who expressed concern over Communism's latest push in Europe were told by Secretary of State Marshall to press for universal training.

Capitol Hill observers are inclined to doubt that the military training bill will win the Armed Services Committee okay. In the House a companion measure is under consideration by the rules committee, with no immediate prospect of floor debate.

Presentation will be made by Jack Lavelle, member of the Lambert Trophy award committee, at a short ceremony in Rec Hall at 7:30 o'clock, preceding the State-Georgetown basketball game.

Marshall Analyzes Rise of Red Power

Communism first rose in Europe because of the failure of Continental Christians to practice the benevolence of their faith, according to Bruce Marshall noted Scottish novelist who spoke in Schwab Auditorium last night.

Marshall is on his first American lecture tour and was sponsored at the College by the Newman Club.

"In my opinion," said the author, "the first phase of Communism was a revolt against Continental upper class Christians. If these people had not failed, Communism would never have risen to its present power."

A veteran of both World Wars and a resident of France during its invasion, Marshall warned the audience that "universally, another war is threatening."

"We have progressed materially rather than morally in the last 100 years," he said. "We have advanced in commodity-production, sounds, and conveyance, but not in morals."

"France," he said, "must not become Communist. If France receives sufficient funds to renew her capital machinery there is a chance that the Frenchman will see the light of reason."

Mr. Marshall, when questioned about Secretary of State Marshall's Recovery Plan, said that with it there is hope of reversing the Communist drive throughout Europe.

Poor To Resume Mural Painting

Henry Varnum Poor will start work on the murals in Old Main on March 15, M. S. Osborne, professor of architecture and chairman of the mural committee, said today.

His daughter, Anne, who did the plastering when Poor painted the fresco on the north wall in 1940, is expected to again assist her father in the completion of the project.

Poor said he would begin work with the large panel on the east wall which extends from the front of the building to the stairway entrance. The fresco on that panel will depict activities of the College throughout the state, as relate to the mining industry in Pennsylvania.

The original fresco was made possible by a gift from the Class of 1932. Gifts of graduating seniors, and other groups, as well as an appropriation of $3,000 by the Trustees of the College, have made possible the completion of the project. Walls in the building have already been prepared for Poor to start his work.
