

White Hall Offers All Coeds Wide Variety of Activities

Whether she is a sports-minded phys-eder, a demure "hom-ecer," female slide rule artist, or just a plain liberal artist, Betty Joed has found the doors of White Hall open to her for leisure hours.

Some may prefer a rough and tumble game of basketball while others would rather spend a quiet hour trumping her partner's aces in a bridge game. Rifle, bowling, badminton, fencing, and almost any sport that interests the modern miss can be found in White Hall with instructors to make champions or at least give a few pointers!

Miss Mildred Lucey, WRA advisor, has compiled statistics showing that 35 percent of coeds take advantage of the opportunities open to them. Nineteen percent participate in club activities while the keen competition offered by the intramural program draws 215 girls or 21 percent.

Rifle Club Members

The Rifle Club has 73 members with the Bridge Club next, having 62 on its roll. After spending many hours a day in classes at White Hall, 86 percent of the physical education majors troop back for one or more activities in the evening. From 30 to 50 percent of the girls enrolled in other schools also find interests at White Hall.

Statistics for the classes present a surprising figure, according to Miss Lucey. Sophomore class participation amounted to 35 percent with 43 percent for the juniors and 28 percent for the seniors. The percentage for the juniors and seniors is amazingly high when it is considered the physical education is not required for most upper-class women.

Sororities Lead

Probably due to the rivalry between the sororities, they lead the organizations in group participation with 51 percent of their women in at least one activity. The sophomore-populated Tri-dorms were next with 43 percent and the independent women last with 35 percent.

These statistics show that while many women do use the facilities available for them while in college, many fail to take full advantage of the program offered here. Actually however, the percentage here is relatively high when compared with other schools, according to Miss Lucey.
