

Political Apathy

Often we are asked why the Students for Wallace group on campus receives publicity in Collegian while there is no mention of Republican and Democratic youth groups. The answer to that question is simple—there are none.

Other colleges have student groups advocating MacArthur, Taft, Stassen, Dewey and the other presidential aspirants as well as the Wallace group. The institutions concerned consider this movement a healthy one.

The door is open here at Penn State. Any political-minded group can now meet on campus according to a clarification by Dean Warnock of the Senate regulations. However, a strong apathy seems to exist in the student body when it comes to national politics. At the three-party forum in Schwab auditorium, representatives of the major parties spoke before only a handful of students and professors.

Both the Democratic and Republican national committees have stated that they are eager to cooperate with interested students and committees, for the various candidates are anxious for an opening on campus.

Let's see a little organization for the other parties and candidates or not sit back and snipe at those who are interested in national politics.

Surely Wallace is not the only candidate that has supporters on campus.—BIF

A Challenge . . .

TO THE EDITOR: The influence of the churches of State College has been shown in the action taken to prevent the showing of movies on Sunday. We feel that this influence could and ought to be exerted in bringing pressure to bear on the barber shops with regard to the problem of racial discrimination.

The combined forces of the church groups and the student body, which overwhelmingly opposes this discrimination, represent the majority voice of the people of State College. This group could carry out an effective plan by warning the barbers that if discrimination continues, new non-discriminatory shops will be set up and patronage will be withheld from the existing ones.

This is a challenge to the churches to take a stand and to show that they are vitally concerned with their beliefs.

DOLLARS FOR TOLERANCE

During the next week, instead of TALKING about equality for Negroes in State College barber-shops, you can back your tolerance with a little cash. NO DONATION. The idea is merely to make advance payments towards a few haircuts.

For $1 you buy a ticket. It's good for 25c credit on each of four haircuts in a non-discriminating shop.

To be fair to your present barber, you ask to have your dollar offered him FIRST. All the dollars like yours will be turned over to your barber if he accepts the non-discrimination agreement. If he doesn't wish to accept, then your ticket will be good in a shop that accepts both the money and the principle.

YOUR DOLLAR IS NOT A GIFT. It's haircut money. If your ticket is not redeemable in barber service of high quality, it will be redeemed in cash.

But your dollars will give a barber solid evidence that in State College IT PAYS TO BE FRIENDLY.
