

Police Declare Meter Holidays

Seven legal holidays, in addition to Sundays, are considered days when motorists need not put money in parking meters in downtown State College, the police department announced today.

Because of the number of inquiries registered by motorists at the police office in recent weeks on the question of what constitutes a holiday, police prepared a list of seven holidays when meters are not checked for violations.

The seven meter-less days include New Year's, Decoration Day, July 4th, Labor Day, Armistice Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.

Clarification of the holiday observance was made in an effort to inform the public to prevent misunderstandings on the use of the meters, police said.

Party Men Attend Wallace Meeting

William Meek and Saul Levinson represented central Pennsylvania youth at a meeting of the temporary executive committee of the Young Progressive Party in Harrisburg Saturday. The committee set up plans for a state-wide conference of the party to be held in conjunction with the State Political Action School in May.

In an opening address by Gerald Schaffner, party executive secretary and Progressive representative at the recent three-party forum at the College, it was pointed out that YPP is an independent organization, the only autonomous state youth group in the country supporting Wallace.

Eight members of the campus Students for Wallace group aided in collecting signatures in Lewistown on petitions to place Mrs. Josephine Stokes on the ballot for state representative. Mrs. Stokes is chair-lady of her local of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Advertisers Give Aptitude Tests

Aptitude tests for college seniors interested in careers in advertising will be held under the auspices of the American Association of Advertising Agencies in 11 cities, including Pittsburgh, April 17.

The examination in Pittsburgh will be held in the Frick School, Thackery Street, in the Oakland district. It will require one day to complete. Candidates will take a knowledge test April 24, but this may be done at home.

The examinations cover aptitudes for copy writing, advertising research, mechanical production, radio and television production, art and layout, media selection, contact, plans and merchandising.

Additional information and application blanks may be obtained by writing Chairman Harry P. Veith or Pittsburgh Chapter, AAAA, at Box 1585, Pittsburgh 30, Pa.

Ag Students Send Aid To Lingnan University

Agricultural students at Lingnan University in Canton, China, soon will receive one and one-half tons of educational material packed for shipment by agricultural educational students of the College. The material, including nearly 10,000 bulletins, pamphlets, and reports, was the collection of Frank D. Gardner, professor emeritus and former head of the agronomy department.

The shipment includes 14 large wooden cases, each of nearly 200 pounds. On its arrival at Lingnan, the material will be catalogued by Richard E. Pride, a graduate of the College, who joined the faculty at Lingnan's agricultural school a year ago.

New WSGA Heads Attend Conference

Janet Lyons and Shirley Gauger, recently elected president and vice-president of WSGA, are attending the Eastern Regional Conference of Intercollegiate Association of Women at Cornell University this week.

The conference started yesterday and will continue until Saturday. Discussions will concern the relation of women's student government to all-college government and the relationship of honoraries to student government and other campus activities.

A report on the annual College May Day sponsored by WSGA will be submitted in reply to the conference's request for a group report on an activity of the local student government association.

The two officers were accompanied by Miss Ellamae Jackson and Mrs. Hibbs of the Dean of Women's office.

Sigma Pi

Faculty News

"Grain Crops," a new textbook written by Dr. Harold K. Wilson, vice-dean and director of resident instruction for the School of Agriculture, was published last week by the McGraw-Hill Company.

The textbook, which, according to the publishers, presents complete information on production of all the principal grain crops in the United States, has been adopted for use by the University of Minnesota where Dr. Wilson was a member of the faculty for 18 years.

Viktor Lowenfeld, professor of art education, will serve as one of the three judges who will criticize 1,000 works of art to be exhibited in the University of Iowa Arts Festival, April 15 to 17. He will also speak on "Personality Development Through Creative Activity" at the Festival.

Among the 400 contributors to the new Britannica Junior, the reference work for boys and girls to be published by the Encyclopedia Britannica, is William Adams Bryan, instructor of geography. Mr. Bryan revised the articles in the geography division.

Peter G. Sulzer, of the Engineering Experiment Station, and Charles R. Ammerman, of the electrical engineering department, are co-authors of an article, "An Oscillator for the 1215-Mc Band," which appeared in the April issue of QST, official organ of the American Radio Relay League.

Dr. Haskell B. Curry, professor of mathematics, has been chosen to present a series of five lectures on "A Theory of Formal Deducibility" at the University of Notre Dame next week.

Dr. Chester D. Dahle, professor of dairy manufacture, will address the Philadelphia Food Technology Society in Philadelphia today.

Ruth E. Graham, professor of home economics, attended the demonstrations and lectures on clothing and textiles held at Cornell University this week.

Dr. William G. Mather, professor of rural sociology, addressed the Mount Union College forum at Alliance, Ohio, Saturday, on "Tensions and Prospects in the Modern Community."

Delpha Weisendanger, assistant director of home economics, represented the American Home Economics association at the 52nd annual meeting of the American Academy of Political and Social Science in Philadelphia last week-end.
