New Division Established; Handles Student Problems

Problems of student maladjustment will be handled by a new Division of Intermediate Registration, James Milholland, acting president of the College, said today.

The new division will offer assistance to students who find themselves confused as to educational objective after a period of attendance at the College. Students who have to discontinue a particular curriculum because of low-grade scholastic performances would also be aided.

According to the plan proposed by the Council of Administration, the director of the Division will be responsible to the assistant to the president in charge of resident instruction. He will cooperate with the College administration, Deans of the Schools, the Deans of Men and Women, Dean of Admissions and Registrar, the Faculty Counselor of Veterans, and the Psychological, Reading, and Speech and Hearing Clinics.

Prove Qualifications

Students must give evidence of being good candidates for remedial treatment before being admitted to the Division.

Two semesters will be the maximum time that students may stay in the Division. After that they must become candidates for degrees in some curriculum or he will be dropped from the College.

Students in the Division will take regular credit courses for the most part. They will count towards a degree only if they meet the requirements of the curriculum in which the student later enrolls.

Graduation Takes Longer

It may require a longer time than usual for graduation in some cases, the president explained.

Registration in the new Division should be regarded as an opportunity rather than as a penalty. Students enrolled in the division will be allowed the same privileges in College activities as other students unless the Director imposes limitations.

Accrediting Committee To Rate Journ Department

Five representatives of leading publishing, editorial and teaching groups of America will be on campus tomorrow and Thursday to rate The Pennsylvania State College department of journalism.

This group of five makes up the National Accrediting Committee of the American Council of Education for Journalism.

For the past 14 years Penn State has held a grade A rating among the nation's schools of journalism. There are 34 other accredited schools at present.

Secretary for the group will be Dr. Earl English of the University of Missouri. The committee also includes Professor John E. Stempel, director of the department of journalism, Indiana University, and Stephen C. Noland, editor of the Indianapolis News.

MI Exhibits Native Art

The Gimbel exhibit—a collection of 116 works of art on Pennsylvania subjects—will be hung in the Mineral Industries Art Gallery for viewing by the public, starting April 25 and continuing through May 8.

Invitations have been issued for a private opening of the exhibit at 3 p.m. April 24.

Of the 14 artists represented in the exhibit, five are Pennsylvanians—George Biddle, Albert Gold, Hobson Pittman, Franklin Watkins, and Andrew Wyeth.

Dentyne Gum—Made Only by Adams

Do YOU know the president of the Men's Athletic Association? He's representing you on All-College Cabinet. So is the chairman of the board of Dramatics and Forensics.

Do YOU know the president of your fraternity or dorm? Under the STATE party's plan for bicameral legislation he would be your representative in the lower house, the Penn State Congress.

Under the present Cabinet system of student government, you are represented by the following voting members:

- Votes
- 3 All-College President, Vice President, and Secretary-Treasurer
 - 3 Presidents of the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes.
 - 7 Presidents of the school councils (L.A. Eng. etc.)
 - 2 Presidents of Men's Athletic and Women's Recreational Association.
 - 1 President of Women's Student Government Association.
 - 2 Chairman of the Boards of Publication, and Dramatics and Forensics.
 - 2 Presidents of IFC and Pan-Hel.
 - 2 ISC Representatives of Independent Men and Women.

The STATE party would replace this one not-too-representative group with a three-branch government similar to that of the United States. Under this plan there would be executive, legislative, and judicial departments.

- 1. The executive—would consist of the All-College President, Vice President, and Secretary-Treasurer. The president would be the administrator and would have a veto power over any acts of the legislature.
- 2. The judicial—would be essentially the same organization as the present Tribunal or Judicial and would have the task of interpreting the constitution.
- 3. The legislature—would be composed of two houses. The upper house (Senate) would be essentially the same group as the present cabinet, including class officers, school officers and organization officers, but excluding the all-college officers. The senior class president would preside over this group.

The lower house (Congress) would be made up of representatives of the various living groups on and off campus, in proportion to the number of residents in each living unit. All legislation would originate in this truly representative group, the lower house. Presiding over this organization would be the All-College Vice President, though he would still retain his full executive powers when not acting in the position of Speaker.

This democratic form of government is one of the major planks of the STATE Party's platform. Every effort will be made to make this democratic form of government a reality at Penn State.

If you wish to support this plan for a democratic and representative form of government, support the STATE Party.
