

Force Vs. Inertia

Old Isaac Newton must have been thinking about human beings when he postulated his "inertia" law of motion.

That "a body at rest tends to remain at rest" is convincingly verified daily by the continued denial of barber service to our fellow students, just because of a matter of skin pigment.

"... unless acted upon by some external force." That's where the rest of us are to blame; we who have the power to exert that force, a force for good. Barbers, being businessmen, are naturally and rightly concerned about their profits.

Many businessmen perforce must operate in a manner contrary to their own personal convictions. Until local barbers are shown conclusively that non-discrimination will not hurt their profits, they will continue to discriminate.

If successful, CORE Days will furnish the evidence that College and town citizens believe in equality and are eager to destroy racial discrimination in local barber shops. It is not a charity drive, the dollars pledged are not donations, but investments in future service, and in democracy.

Primarily, it is not even the function of CORE Days to raise money, but to guarantee patronage of any non-discriminatory barber shop. Each ticket sold represents one sure customer.

Fortunately, Isaac went a little further, and came up with a second law, "a body in motion tends to remain in motion." Once the force is applied to start eliminating discrimination, there should be no limit to the beneficial results we could obtain, in other daily matters.

Our inertia can be overcome. Each loyal supporter, each dollar, is an important force. But the inertia is strong, so the combined force of all is required.

Inauguration

An important event is occurring on the campus today—important enough to justify release of eleven o'clock classes five minutes early, by acting President Milholland.

The event of course is the inauguration of new student government officers on the front steps of Old Main at 11:50 o'clock this morning.

Inauguration of officers is always one of the important events in the life of an organization. At the College, inauguration of student officers is especially important.

The ceremonies will be one of the few times that most students will see their elected officers in an official capacity. The amount of student interest in their own elected government is also an indication of student support. And this support, as has been often pointed out, is the determining factor in the success of Cabinet in carrying out its programs.

Over 1000 students voted William Lawless, All-College president-elect, into office. That many, at least, should be interested enough to see him take office.

The rest of the student body should be interested in meeting the officers who will guide the affairs of the student body in the coming year.

Your leaders will be inaugurated today. It is to your interest to be present at the event.
