

Muralist Poor Takes Vacation

Henry Varnum Poor's "vacation" from the College Land Grant mural is in the nature of a busman's holiday.

Poor, aided by his daughter Anne, who assisted him with the original section of the College fresco, is depicting Kentucky life in a mural, 45 feet long by 14 feet high, in the Courier-Journal Building.

Poor started on the new work May 3 and will complete it next week. In preparation for the task he travelled through a large part of Kentucky studying people and countryside, reading history and absorbing what he could of native information.

Shortly after Poor began work the Courier-Journal Magazine, a Sunday supplement, featured him, Anne, and his work with a cover color photograph, a biography, a description of his methods, and six illustrations of his art.

Referring to his work at the College, the article says, "He has been most recently working on two matching panels for the Pennsylvania State College, 'The Land Grant Mural.' This is a particularly interesting assignment for the students themselves raised the money as their class... gifts and when the first fresco was finished undergraduates liked it so well they pledged enough in advance to insure a second. Cornerstones Hold Histories

Penn State coeds who may have the opportunity to look into the cornerstones of Simmons or McElwain Halls centuries hence will see what their ancestors, the coeds of 1948, wore.

Sealed in copper boxes and placed in the cornerstones for the new dormitories were two dolls one dressed in sweater, skirt and bobby sox, the other in a net evening gown. The gown is an exact copy and made from the same material as one worn by Anna Wynosky, who graduated this month.

Dr. Pearl O. Weston, dean of women, who presided at the cornerstone ceremonies June 5, said that a scrapbook of present-day coeds was also included in the stones.

Names of personnel who have been in charge of women students since they were first admitted in 1871 were included. There have been four preceptresses, two lady principals, five deans, two acting deans, 20 assistants, 20 secretaries and 29 hostesses.

Some of the publications placed in the stones are Pathways to Service, What is WSGA?, Panhellenic Guidebook, Home Economics at Penn State, WSGA Regulations for Women Students, IFC Code for Unchaperoned Dating.

shows his work is eminently good to live with."

Alumni Re-elect Three Trustees

Three members of the Board of Trustees have been re-elected and four new ones have been chosen.

Alumni elected J. E. Hotzinger '25, general manager of the Altoona Mirror; Charles L. Kinsloe '03, professor emeritus of electrical engineering; and George H. Young '32, assistant director of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research in Pittsburgh. They replace George M. Arisman '18, J. L. Krall '19 and Harold W. Montz '07.

Delegates of county agricultural and industrial societies selected Frederick E. Bittenbender to fill a vacancy created by the death of M. J. Grimes. They re-elected Kenzie S. Bagshaw, J. A. Boak and John N. Forker.

Chimes Honors Recent Graduates

Mary Margaret Barnett, who was graduated from the College on June 7, was named first vice-president of Chimes, junior women's honor society, at the national convention held in Columbus, O.

At the same time, Miss Edith Zinn, assistant to the dean of women, was one of two honorary members inducted into Chimes in model initiation ceremonies. She has been acting national director to the organization.

Chimes, with five chapters, and Key and Scroll, with three chapters on the West Coast, will be merged. Penn State is one of the four charter members of Chimes, the new chapter having been established at Bradley University, Peoria, Ill.

Nancy Ault, a senior at the College, is retiring national president
