Compulsion leads to evasion, and evasion to corruption.

Whipple's Dam

Sunday a girl's middle toe was almost severed while swimming at Whipple's Dam. Maybe you were responsible for leaving the broken bottle or tin can that did the job. Maybe you will be the next to receive a dangerous and inconveniencing wound.

In the scorching days of summer that lie ahead, those refreshing afternoons and evenings at Whipple's will offer more and more welcome relief from the heat and torpor of classroom and dorm.

That bottles, cans and other debris will detract from the beauty and restfulness of the surroundings goes without saying. It is also a truism that each person is responsible for his own actions that may contribute to or detract from the beauty and utility of one of our favorite summer spots.

Although we students are not the only patrons, our training in leadership can well be exercised by setting a constructive example. "Letting George do it" is infeasible since the State's personnel and funds for policing the area are limited.

For better swimming, do not leave rubbish.

Male Chorus

Unforgettable demonstrations of beautiful harmonious singing and democracy in action was witnessed by those fortunate enough to attend the concert of the American Male Chorus, first number of the Summer Artists Series, last week.

Under the able baton of Lt. Lewis Bullock, the 20 overseas veterans showed their love of singing and put everything they had into it. The genuine comradeship of members of various races, working together as a team, was obvious and sincere.

Even outward signs of the Army caste system were gone, as no chevrons or bars were worn on their uniforms. This was no doubt a true indication of their inner attitudes.

Musical highlights followed one after the other in the widely-varied program, designed originally to please any musical taste. Some of the most outstanding were "Old Man River," "Begin the Beguine," "Ballad for Americans," and "Song of the United Nations," by Lt. Bullock.

If the other three numbers of the Summer Artists Series approach the excellency of the American Male Chorus, those who avail themselves of the opportunity will be the beneficiaries of top-notch entertainment, at low cost.
