

CARE

"Now that I have a feeling of having you beside me, I can with more faith look forward to the future," writes Vasilios Papanaghiotou, a chemistry student at the University of Athens, Greece, thanking a fellow chemist, a Penn Stater, for a CARE food package.

"I'm sorry I have nothing pleasant to write about," he continues, "since times are so hard. We have to work so hard we are not having time for fun and the merry life. But we are trying to make ourselves the best we can, because we still have optimism for the future."

What a wonderful investment in world relations, in international friendship, in the realization of Wendell Willkie's "One World," a ten dollar bill can be.

Cooperative for American Remittances to Europe, Inc., 50 Broad street, New York 4, N. Y., is a non-profit association of 26 agencies—religious, labor, cooperative, international, service, children's—which prepares and delivers, in person, food and textile packages, at $10 each, to needy persons in 18 European countries.

The need for private aid to meet present dangers of malnutrition still exists in spite of the long-range European Recovery Program, whose goal of making Europe self-sustaining will not be reached for 18 months at the earliest.

More important, the human touch, the neighborliness, the person-to-person elements of CARE packages will do more to cement individual friendships, which are the most solid foundation on which to build lasting international friendship.

But we don't have any friends or relatives in Europe. That doesn't matter; you may specify the country, and even the occupation of the desired recipient.

Presumably you are interested in what foreign students or teachers are doing and thinking. What could be a better way to become acquainted with persons whose interests are very much like your own?

A friend in need is a friend indeed. In no other way can you send so much for so little . . .

You never take me any place!

Nominations

Shenanigans at the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia last week did nothing to alter our conviction expressed three weeks ago that the convention method of presidential nomination, colorful and traditional as it admittedly is, is not the democratic way to winnow aspirants to the highest elective office in the United States.

Woodrow Wilson, himself, said that the power of the president should not be permitted to influence the selection of his successor, either himself or another. He wanted to accomplish this restriction by elimination of the convention. Actually the political bosses are more to be feared, and could more certainly be thwarted by this forward step.

So far the majority of our presidents have been satisfactory, perhaps in spite of the convention, writes Beverly Smith, Washington correspondent of SatEvePost. Of course that is no guarantee that this will continue, or even that the best available man has always won.

Concerted, unflagging effort by individual citizens and voters in the next four years can insure an end to "smoke-filled room" nominations, and the beginning of a more dignified and democratic selection of a president by popular primaries and popular elections.

Faculty News

Dr. Fred F. Lininger, director of the agricultural experiment station, is in Nanking, China on a special assignment for the new international food and agriculture organization of the United Nations.

During his absence, research at the College is under the direction of Dr. Michael A. Farrel, assistant director of the experiment station since January.

Dr. Lininger, who has been director of the station since 1942, is also vice-dean of the School of Agriculture.

The first Summer School, authorized by the College trustees in 1896, was a two-weeks session following commencement. It was a required course for all freshman, sophomore and junior students in engineering.

Dr. Smith Presides At Vesper Services

Dr. G. Morris Smith, president of Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, will speak on "Who is the Greatest?" at the Vesper service to be held in Schwab Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Dr. Smith, a noted clergyman and educator, received his Doctor of Letters degree from Bucknell University. He is a member of the executive council of the United Lutheran church and has contributed to several religious publications. Dr. Smith is also a member of the Pennsylvania State Council of Education.

Special music under the direction of George Ceiga, organist, will also be presented.
