Phone Problem

Expansion of the dormitory telephone exchange has turned out to be a mixed blessing for men living in the West Dorms (formerly Tri-Dorms), with the announcement that incoming and outgoing calls, with certain exceptions, are discontinued after 10 p. m.

Nittany Dorm and Pollock Circle residents are slated to feel the same limitations of a common necessity as soon as their phones are connected to the dormitory switchboards.

Origin of the ruling was difficult to trace, but it was finally learned that it was instituted by the supervisor of utilities, with the concurrence, on a trial basis, of the dean of men.

Neither the Council on Administration nor the Board of Trustees has any jurisdiction in the matter, according to the executive secretary to the president.

The difficulty of hiring operators for the later hours was given as the principal reason for the curtailment of the service, although possible abuses by a few individuals, and the disturbing of men trying to study were offered as contributory factors.

Dorm councils will soon be organized in each of the residential units affected. One of their first tasks might well be a consideration of the pros and cons of an extension of telephone service to some reasonable hour, such as midnight, and a forwarding of recommendations, through the resident counsellors, to the dean of men, for possible remedial action.

The futility of individual action cannot be overstressed, nor can the frequently amazing success of recognized governing bodies. The Collegian editor will lend his vigorous support to such groups attempting to solve their own legitimate grievances through proper channels.

A Different Picture

What happened to Penn State against Syracuse? Where was our pass defense? What's the matter with our passing attack? These and many other questions were hurled back and forth Friday night after the "Rosey Rosewell" broadcast of the Penn State-Syracuse game.

Although the Lions batted down 19 out of 31 Syracuse passes, held the Orange on the 10-yard line for four downs, and outplayed the opposition at every turn, everyone who heard the radio account of the game pictured an altogether different story.

On each of the 12 passes caught, the Syracuse end or back had to battle with a Penn State defense man to gain possession of the ball, and it was a rare occasion when an Orange griddler was "in the open" to receive a Custis pass.

The Atlantic announcer, a local product, naturally extolled even the small gains of the home team while minimizing the gains of the visitors.

Everyone who heard Friday night's broadcast received the reports from someone seeing the game as an attempt by "little David" Syracuse to valiantly battle the "Goliath" Penn State and not the story of two teams fighting for a victory.

From now until the end of the season, each Penn State opponent will outdo itself to try to dethrone the Lions, since the team that performs this feat will be classed as a success no matter what its season's record shows.

Next Saturday the Nittany team will meet another passing attack and this time you, instead of the Rosy Rosewell of the gridiron, will be the judge of Penn State's effectiveness against aerial warfare.

Safety Valve

Democratic Way

TO THE EDITOR: From time to time the Collegian prints letters from individual students who have complaints and suggestions which relate to matters within the managerial jurisdiction of College officials.

It is well that students have this opportunity to express their individual views, but they should understand also that the College officials must deal directly with student government councils and look to these councils to serve as channels through which the representative majority opinions of the students which they respectfully represent may be transmitted to the College officials.

That procedure is not only the soundest way of canvassing majority student opinion, but also it is the most democratic way.

How Come?

TO THE EDITOR: My curiosity has been aroused! I have encountered a problem which needs an answer for my peace of mind. Despite many sleepless nights, applied calculus, and Econ. 14, the solution has still eluded me.

Now my problem, Mr. Anthony is this—How can the Teachers' Colleges give more food with greater variety and service at $6.50 a week than the Nittany dining hall does at $12.50?
