

PSCA Sets Up Clearing House To Aid Voting

A driver-passenger clearing house is being set up to aid student voters to find economical transportation to and from their homes on Election Day, November 2.

The clearing house, operated by the commission on social responsibility of the Penn State Christian Association, will post lists of drivers who want passengers, and of passengers who need rides.

Because citizens of voting age are required to vote in the district in which they are registered, student voters will have to go home to cast ballots.

Persons interested in the driver-passenger system are invited to contact the PSCA or to sign up at Student Union giving both name and destination. Dorothy Fleagle heads the commission.

In cooperation with PSCA, the Daily Collegian will publish lists of drivers and passengers in every issue next week.

Hort Show Gives Exhibit

Forest fire prevention will be the theme of the special exhibit being arranged by the Forestry Society for the Hort Show featuring the Homecoming week-end at the College, announced Heinz J. Heinaman, president of the society. The Hort Show will be held in the livestock pavilion on Ag Hill, with no admittance charges.

While emphasizing the need for preventing forest fires, the display also includes special equipment used by the foresters to fight forest fires. Each piece of equipment will have a description with it, and in addition to the familiar pieces, the display will have such lesser-known items as the pulaski, rich-rake, alidade and others.

Blotters and educational literature have been obtained by the Forestry Society from the State Department of Forests and Waters and also the U.S. Forest Service for free distribution.

Arrangements for exhibit are in charge of S. Theodore Gilbert, William Ludwig, William Ritchey, Alan Schmidt and Frederick Trexler.

LA Elections

Sparks lobby will be the scene of the Liberal Arts Student Council elections from 9 o'clock to 4 o'clock today and tomorrow. All Liberal Artists are eligible to vote and must present their matriculation cards. However, each student may cast a ballot for candidates in his own class only.

In yesterday's Daily Collegian James Yochum, a senior nominee, was incorrectly named Earl Yochum.

Greeks Invited To Mardi Gras

Mortar Board invites fraternities for the first time to participate in the Mardi Gras Carnival, to be held in Rec Hall October 29.

All fraternities interested in setting up a booth alone or in conjunction with a sorority should contact Janet Lyons at the Kappa, Kappa Gamma house immediately.

The Mardi Gras is a new idea for the carnival sponsored by the Mortar Board. As in previous years, sororities and independent groups will be requested to operate booths, refreshment stands or provide some other entertainment.

The highlight of the evening will be the selection of a Mardi Gras King from the contestants entered by the sororities. All sororities are requested to hand in photographs of king candidates at the Student Union desk by Tuesday noon, October 26.

Proceeds from the carnival will go to the Charlotte E. Ray Scholarship Fund to which Mortar Board contributes every year.

Lines from the Lion

Dear Gang,

I am writing this epistle from Cave Inn, a place used as a stopover exclusively by traveling Lions. The place has sure changed since I was here last but now is no time to be sentimental.

It sure made my big heart pound harder and faster when I heard that "Ike" Gilbert has me scheduled to meet Army's Cadets on the gridiron next year and the year after that.

With Penn, Nebraska, Army and Pitt on next year's menu I'll really have a job on my hands.

I guess 13 is a lucky number for me, anyway it was last Saturday. Fourteen should be just as lucky. Just ask Owen Dougherty about number 14. That's his jersey number when he was on the receiving end of one of Petchel's aerials against the Mountaineers.

On the way up here I read that Louisiana State University has recently issued a new college regulation. It is now forbidden for LSU students to bring intoxicating beverages to athletic events since a student was hurt seriously at a recent football game when someone threw a beer bottle at him.

I was glad to see that Beaver Field commandos have more sense than that. They drink beer out of cans and everyone knows that no one can get hurt by an empty can.

I should get to East Lansing by tomorrow. Write you then. For the glory.

Mailing Causes AIM Vote Delay

Failure to obtain sufficient help in preparing post cards for mailing to independent men students living in town has caused delay in scheduling AIM representative elections in town wards.

Donald Little, AIM committee chairman, had originally planned to have the postcards, telling the time and place of elections in each ward, ready for mailing early this week.

The elections were to have been staged in all town wards Wednesday and Thursday nights. With no one to address the cards, however, the mailing date has been put off until next week, and elections have been tentatively rescheduled for two days later in the week.

Tri-dorm elections were also set back from Monday until later this week to coincide with the regular dormitory meetings.

Elections in two town wards, those comprised by Cody Manor and Beaver House, have already been run off, making a total of 40 men who have already been elected to the AIM council.

Osmond Auto Lot Ready Saturday

Enlargement of the parking area behind Osmond Laboratory will be completed by Saturday, if the weather permits work to go on all week, said George W. Ebert, director of physical plant.

Capacity of the area will be raised by 70 cars, as part of a program which will add an estimated 237 parking spaces to campus facilities. One phase of the plan will bring one-way traffic to Pollock road, effective November 1, with bumper-to-bumper parking except in construction areas and other danger points.

Work already under way on the parking area north of Patterson Hall on Curtin road, will provide an additional 68 spaces when completed.

Ag Group Picture

Members of Ag Student Council are requested to report to the Penn State Photo Shop at 7 o'clock this evening for a group picture.

Following the picture the group will adjourn to 103 Ag Building for a short business meeting.

Committee Solves Explosion in Lab

A special committee investigating the explosion that claimed the life of Ernest J. Teichert Monday, reported today that a mixture of undetermined inflammable substance and liquid air caused the explosion.

Mr. Teichert, research assistant in metallurgy, was working alone in a laboratory in the Mineral Industries Building October 7, when the explosion occurred.

He was working on research having to do with the mechanism of fracture of steel, a project conducted for the Army, when the apparatus, especially designed to prevent contact of the inflammable substance and liquid air, blew up.

The committee said it was unable to determine how the mixture took place, but believes that "frothing of the liquid air is believed to have, in some manner, penetrated the barrier separating the two materials."

"Such experiments are always carried on with great care," said Dean Edward Steidle of the School of Mineral Industries, and "our researchers get the finest equipment that science can supply." The explosion, he said, was the first serious accident in the school in 20 years.

Vets Turn in Receipts

All veterans are requested to turn in their book receipts at the Bursar's office by noon Saturday. These receipts should be filled out as specified on the forms signed, and placed in an envelope.

If all receipts have been turned in by Saturday, the veterans can pick up their checks by approximately November 15. Any veterans who turn their receipts in at a later date will not be able to receive their checks until December 15.

Dormitory Men Register Gripes With Group

Nittany Dormitory students submitted approximately one thousand "gripes" to a group from the College Cabinet Investigating committee. The food sub-committee is currently surveying conditions of Campus dining commons.

Richard Schlegel, chairman of the investigating committee announced yesterday that the Nittany Dining Hall survey proved to be a success.

About four hundred students registered an average of three complaints with the six committees stationed throughout the Nittany Dining Commons.

The investigators were occupied almost continually during the hour and a half allotted for the students to voice their opinions of the dining accommodations.

Coeds in the Simmons, McAllister, and Atherton Halls will have an opportunity to register their criticisms; however, suggestion boxes will replace the sub-committee on complaints.

Committee chairman Schlegel announced that the next meeting of the investigating committee is scheduled in the second floor lounge, Old Main, at 6:30 o'clock tonight.
