KAT Expresses Thanks Gives Fraternity The 'Bird'

Reciprocity may not have been the motivating influence, but anyway Thetas seemed to have extended the meaning to "a duck for a duck."

Not content with an ordinary thank you, members of Kappa Alpha Theta personally delivered a seven-pound drake to Sigma Alpha Epsilon as a means of expressing gratitude for a duck dinner.

He wasn't supposed to have that innate capacity for flying, but something hidden enabled him to break his leash and disappear. Pledges scoured the neighborhood until a relief call from Acacia assured the brothers of his whereabouts.

"Minerva" spent Friday night in the bathtub, closest substitute for his original habitat. Though a note specified laying mash and oats as the proper food a few members scoffed at the idea and insisted beer could do no harm. Just in case, however, "Minerva" was allowed corn and bread crumbs.

Because of the problem innocent "Minerva" raised, he was presented to the chapter cook. Another duck dinner, perhaps?
