

The Nittany Realm

By GEORGE VADASZ

Leo Houck, colorful Penn State boxing coach, was reunited with an old boxing opponent at a Lancaster banquet honoring Houck and his three brothers Wednesday.

The opponent was Harry Lewis, the boxer Leo fought for the middleweight title in France in 1911. The former scrappers reminisced over their twenty-round battle which was won by Houck on a decision.

Although Houck never actually won the championship belt, he was one of the more deserved claimants to the title between 1911 and 1914. After the death of Stanley Ketchel, the title remained open and several fighters made a claim.

Frank Klaus, who beat Houck and Georges Carpentier, of France, lost the title to George Chip. Leo Houck had defeated Chip five times previous to his winning the championship but was never able to gain a match with the titleholder.

The fight with Lewis was termed by Houck "one of the toughest I ever had." Leo had won two decisions over Lewis in the United States but these were called "flukes" by Lewis' manager, so Leo went to France to prove permanently who was the better fighter.

The fight was grueling throughout, with Houck the better man at long range. Houck was given a unanimous decision, much to the French crowd's approval.

During his fighting days Houck never discriminated between his opponents, taking on any man in his weight class or heavier. He fought such well-known heavyweights as Gene Tunney, Gunboat Smith and Battling Levinsky, the last of whom he defeated. The outstanding man Houck fought in his own class was Harry Greb, the "Human Windmill," considered by many experts as the greatest fighter who ever lived.

The Nittany boxing coach said that the trouble with present-day fighters is that they do not train hard enough and, therefore, get tired late in the fight.

A most important accessory in a woman's attire is a smartly styled watch. The new Elgin Watches are acclaimed in best-dressed circles all over America. Yet, as Miss Russell said, "Brilliant styling is only half their glory." Beneath their beauty is a remarkable advancement in timekeeping—Elgin's DuraPower Mainspring.

Here for the first time in any watch is a mainspring that will never rust—and rust is the greatest cause of breakage. A mainspring that holds its original "springiness" for a permanency of timekeeping performance never before possible. Here, in all new Elgins at no extra cost, is a mainspring that eliminates 99% of watch repairs due to steel mainspring failures.

Surely you'll want the very smartest styling in your watch, and this newest achievement of America's creative and productive genius. Give someone a gift hint! Only in an Elgin Watch can you have both . . . an Elgin with the DuraPower symbol "dp" on the dial.
