Religion-In-Life

International relations, war and peace and the problems they pose for Christians, and race relations are some of the topics that will be discussed at the Religion-in-Life Week meetings. Plans for the occasion, which will occur February 20-24, are being made by a general committee composed of students, staff and faculty representatives from each of the church groups and from the Christian Association, as well as representatives from campus organizations such as All-College Cabinet and the Interfraternity Council.

The purpose of Religion-in-Life Week is twofold. First, to reach out to the students who are not being influenced by either the church groups or the Christian Association and to help them to see the relevance of religion to their daily lives; secondly, to deepen the religious convictions of those who are already mildly or vitally interested.

The committee expects to do some of the out-reaching work by sending speakers into living units for meals and subsequent bull sessions, through class room appointments, and through seminars or discussion groups.

On February 20, plans will be made for a mass meeting of which the student church groups will probably constitute the majority. Another mass meeting will be held February 24 to which Norman Thomas has been invited to speak.

Religion-in-Life Week, an annual occurrence at the College, is an extremely worthwhile thing for students to become acquainted with and to participate in.

"I Only Imagined . . ."

TO THE EDITOR: I was one of those 91 discontented souls who complained to the Food Committee about the starches in the food being served at the Nittany Dining Commons. The article in the Daily Collegian, which informed me that Miss Fall and the Food Committee had come to the conclusion that such a situation did not exist, relieved me no end. I'm glad that I only imagine that the food is starchy.

One Sunday shortly after the beginning of the semester, the noon menu consisted of greasy pork, mashed potatoes, bread filling, bread and butter, milk and dessert. Because I call that a bit too starchy, the Food Committee has the intestinal fortitude to call me a "liar."

According to the Collegian, the Food Committee and Miss Fall arrived at the fact that the starch complaint was unfounded by examining old menus. Did it ever occur to them that perhaps we don't get exactly what is printed on those joke heets? For example: Listed—Baked Potato, Swiss steak; we got—Boiled Yam and hamburger.

rooms, but also gives the establishment owners more protection because everytime a bartender or owner is fined by the State law for serving a minor, it will also be possible to fine the minor under the local ordinance.

This ordinance will not apply to fraternities, clubs, or private residences.

If passed by the borough council, State College will be the first town in Pennsylvania to adopt such an ordinance although in some other states there are similar state-wide laws and ordinances.

Local Enforcement

Local police officers will play a bigger part in enforcing the Minors' Ordinance than they now do in enforcing the State Liquor Control Act, for the ordinance provides that "any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed and adjudged to be a disorderly person, and upon conviction thereof before either the Burgess or any Justice of the Peace shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than ten-dollars and not more than $100 for each and every such violation, and upon default in payment of said fine or fines, shall be sentenced to serve one day in jail for each one-dollar fine, but not to exceed 30 days."

The local WCTU is almost the only organized group which strongly opposes the Minors' Ordinance. Mrs. E. L. Moffitt, president of the State College chapter, said the WCTU "will definitely protest the transfer of responsibility of sales from the licensee to immature people."

"The real reason for the ordinance is to save wear and tear on bartenders who cannot easily tell who is a minor. Taxpayers would be giving protection to the taprooms which other businesses do not need or get," said Mrs. Moffitt.

The WCTU chapter in State College numbers about 125 women. "The WCTU," said Mrs. Moffitt, "will never support any ordinance which is backed by any liquor interests."

In the 1870's College avenue was known as the Centre Furnace-Spruce Creek Turnpike.
