A.H. Espenshade

Professor Espenshade was named head of the department of English composition and journalism in 1928, where he continued to serve until he retired in 1937 with emeritus rank.

A graduate of Wesleyan University at Middletown, Conn., Professor Espenshade received his master of arts degree at Columbia University. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of Phi Kappa Phi, both national scholastic honor societies. He was also a member of Chi Psi, social fraternity, the American Association of Collegiate Registrars, Lancaster County Historical Society, and the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

Wrote English Texts

Professor Espenshade is the author of "Pennsylvania Place Names", but is best known for his texts on English composition. In 1933, Professor Espenshade and T. J. Gates, now professor and head of the department of English composition at the College, published "Essentials of English Composition" which is widely used in this country and in the British Isles.

Ag Professors Present Reports

Five of the technical reports featuring the annual sessions of the American Society of Animal Production held recently in Chicago, were presented by members of the School of Agriculture faculty.

In the nutrition division, Dr. A. L. Bortree, new member of the animal husbandry faculty, was co-author with Michigan scientists, on "Types and numbers of micro-organisms in the rumen contents of cattle being fed natural and semi-synthetic rations." The same division heard J. W. Bratzler, J. R. Barnes and R. W. Swift, all of the department of animal nutrition report on "Effects of thioracal on the metabolism of rats."

For the pastures divisions, J. L. Gobble, R. C. Miller and F. L. Bentley were co-authors of a report on "Pasture for Swine" which summarized extensive tests made on the College's swine herds.

Within the breeding and genetics division, William L. Henning and Glen R. Kean, a graduate student, reported on experiments conducted at the College on production of hot-house lambs. Prof. P. T. Zeigler and James A. Christian presented a paper to the Meats division on factors influencing the quality of frozen storage meat, which summarizes extensive studies conducted at the College on food freezing.

Independent Men Name Co-Advisors

Dr. Ray Carpenter of the psychology department and Mr. Ross Lehman of the Athletic Association were named co-faculty advisors of the Association of Independent Men meeting Monday night.

Other appointments made by the newly organized organization were: Ed. Armsley, publicity; Bill Manus, social chairman; Bill Norcross, historian; and Eric Brown, CORE representative.

A committee headed by Ed. Walacavage was appointed to investigate ways of raising funds. Armsley stated that a list of the AIM representatives and their addresses will be posted on the outdoor bulletin board in front of Carnegie Hall, and all "gripes" from independent students should be handled through these representatives.

Chemists at the College developed the Army's famed explosive RDX.
