ous schools of the College and their specialized activities.

The mural is all done in true fresco, which means that it is painted directly on wet plaster, applied fresh every painting day. With the exception of the plaster itself, Mr. Poor brings all his own materials. According to the artist this has been the custom of mural artists since the days of the Renaissance when traveling muralists roamed Italy carrying their pigments and tools with them.

Stewart Frost Aids Artist

Previously, Mr. Poor's daughter, Miss Anne Poor, has done all the plastering work for her father but this year she is being aided by Stewart Frost, a junior in Arts and Letters at the College. Although plastering is a new experience for Frost, who is a talented artist, Mr. Poor says he is doing very well.

Asked what he thought of Penn State, the artist said, "I've never seen so much activity in my life, but I've grown very fond of the place." Mr. Poor has never worked on a college building before. Most of his murals are in government buildings, and this summer he finished a mural in the new Louisville Courier Building in Louisville.

The painting of the first wall was made possible by a generous gift of the Class of 1932. The present panel and the second panel, finished last spring, are the gifts of several classes.

required for haircuts in order to keep customers in the chairs longer, one picket stating that he had seen a barber spend 45 minutes cutting the hair of a nearly-bald man. Several barbers also were idle in this shop.

Only one barber chair was being operated at Hartman's shop further south on Allen street, yesterday and pickets reported that few students had been patronizing the shop.

Position Unchanged

At Cassidy's shop, where two barbers were at work, one hair-cutter at first said there had been no effect on business and then reverted to the standard "no comment" attitude, saying that the barbers had not changed their original position (against cutting Negroes' hair).

The NAACP previously announced that it plans to continue the boycott campaign until Friday. Pickets first began to appear in front of local barber shops last Thursday and the campaign officially got underway Friday.

Thus far, picketing has been termed "orderly" by Borough Police Chief John R. Juba, who Meek reported recently, had guaranteed police protection to pickets so long as they remained within the law.

To activate the boycott, a rally was held on the steps of Old

Here is a big International Truck doing a big job—taking huge logs out of the woods to a sawmill where they will be cut into lumber for much-needed homes.

Applied social science

1. Customers 2. Employees 3. Stockholders

IT TAKES big companies to turn out and service equipment like this. At International Harvester we have the idea that when a company grows beyond a certain size, it becomes a social as well as business institution. And that as a social institution it has certain well-defined responsibilities.

So we like to think that this picture is an illustration of applied social science. The employees built the truck, but it would not have been built if the customers had not wanted to buy it, nor would it have been built if the stockholders had not furnished Harvester with the necessary capital.

At International Harvester we believe that our business should be run not for any one of these groups alone, but for all of them together . . . customer, employe, and stockholder.

For our employes, this policy means providing well-paid jobs to the largest number of men and women who can be productively employed. Today we have more than 90,000 employes. Before the war we had 60,000. The average straight-time hourly earnings of our factory employes have increased 92.6% since 1941.

For our customers, it means producing the best possible goods and services at the lowest possible cost. Our margin of profit on sales today is one-third less than in 1941.

For our stockholders, it means a fair return for the savings they have invested in our Company. Dividends on common stock in 1947 were equivalent to 5% on the book value, as compared with 4% in 1941.

The Company as a whole had profits, after taxes, in 1947, of 5½ cents from each dollar of sales. We believe most people regard this as a reasonable rate of profit.

We know it is our continuing ability to earn a reasonable profit that has made it possible for International Harvester, again in this past year, to serve more people—customers, employes, and stockholders in greater measure than ever before.

Profits mean progress for everyone.

We hope to be able to continue to make a reasonable profit with each succeeding year in the future.
