

Scheduling Office Closes Courses

"A large number of courses scheduled for the Spring semester have been closed. A list of the courses will be sent to all seniors so that students will not be required to return to their advisors from the Board of Control because the students found that the courses were closed," explained Ray V. Watkins, College scheduling officer.

For the benefit of those seniors who complained of early registration this year, Mr. Watkins stated that the reason for this step was to insure all seniors of their choice in subjects next semester.

Stone, in the two-mile. Stone's other competition will be defending champ Forest Efav, and Fred Wilt, who outdistanced Stone at Washington last week.

Departing from his usual two-mile stint Saturday night, Stone will enter the mile run in Boston, with Karver, Tom Quinn, Bill Mack and Browning Ross furnishing the opposition in Stone's big-time mile debut.

The Nittany Realm

But Chuck pounded his way out with a vengeance and after this first encounter he showed indication of becoming one of the Blue and White's outstanding heavies.

Demonstrating knockout wallop in either hand, Charley boy, as his brother Joe calls him, went on to defeat his next six opponents. First to taste defeat was Ray Fine of Syracuse; then Vito Parisi of Wisconsin; Art Hughlett of Michigan State; Lapsley Hamblen of Virginia; then Fine again in the intercollegiate and finally Walter Ilgenfritz of Coast Guard.

DECLINES

After copping the Eastern title Chuck was urged to go to the NCAA tourney at Wisconsin but he thought it wiser to decline the invitation.

Winner of the unlimited crown at this Wisconsin tourney was Vito Parisi, a slugger whom Chuck had earlier in the season defeated by a 29-26 decision. Harry McCormick, Wisconsin State Journal sports editor, describing the fight, wrote:

"The Pier 6 brawl came in the heavyweight scrap when Chuck Drazenovich won after he and Parisi had clouted each other with everything but the waterbuckets. Both dished it out and both showed a willingness and an ability to absorb punishment that was amazing."

TECHNIQUES

Chuck has come a long way since that Wisconsin encounter in which he triumphed over Parisi, the 1948 NCAA heavyweight champ. When talking about Drazenovich, the veteran Lion boxing mentor, Leo Houck, says: "He uses his left hand better than most collegiate heavyweights but he can also hit with his right and last year I urged him to develop his boxing technique first before plunging into the 'bitting end of the game.'"

But the time is ripe now and that potential bundle of TNT that Chuck loads in his right arm is about to explode. As Chuck puts it: "I hope it will when I meet Corleto again."

last year's 175 division, Paul Smith is waging a bitter battle to oust Bob Keller at 165 pounds.

175-POUNDER

Al Peluso, a footballer of the Higgins grid machine, is reaching top fighting strength. Peluso participated in a few intramural bouts while at California State Teachers College and at present seems to be the most capable performer in the light-heavyweight division.

Ollie Wallace, surprise boxer of the recent intramural mitt tourney, is working out daily to pare his weight down to 135 pounds. Should the stylish Negro battler reach that weight, he'll be the most able contender in that division.

SHEEHE, LACHOWSKI

Both Stan Lachowski and Jack Sheehe, the two top men for the 145- and 155-pound positions, weigh around 150 pounds at present. Houck had not yet decided which should add and which should drop weight.

Four Pairs Win Bridge Tourney

Four pairs of bridge players were named yesterday as Penn State's official representatives in next month's Middle Atlantic intercollegiate bridge competition.

Robert Tobias, bridge club prexie, named the four teams after a three-session all-College tourney which finished this week. The four top pairs were: first, John Sedako and Chen Hwa; second, Stephen Skapuik and Arnold Levine; third, Richard Fisher and Donald Harris; fourth, Robert Bemus and Mackay Emmert.

Tobias stated that plans are underway for another all-College bridge tournament next semester.

Petchel, Sam--

boarded a DC-6 which took them, in just nine hours, to Hawaii.

Two games were scheduled in Hawaii, one the 5th of January and the second the 12th. Although billed as East-West competition, Tamburo and Petchel were the only football players from the East Coast region and the contest was actually West vs. Far West.

ENJOY HAWAII TOUR

When they were not practicing, the Penn State representatives rode outriggers on the surf, toured the island, swam and went to a Hawaiian pig roast. One of the high spots on the trip was the visit to Coconut Island, a private island owned by a few millionaires and accessible only by boat and invitation.

The island, 16 acres of swimming pools, tennis courts and fishing docks contained everything imaginable to keep a millionaire happy. The football players were treated royally there as they were throughout their stay in Honolulu.

Finally, after the second game, Petchel and Tamburo, tanned by the sun and loaded down with aloha shirts, pearls and other gifts for the folks back home, took another DC-6 and returned to State College just in time for final exam week.

Both gridders are looking toward professional grid careers for a few years and then to coaching. The games? The North and East lost all three, each by one touch-down.
