The Safety Valve

Extremely Heartening

TO THE EDITOR: Although the Spring Carnival scheduled for yesterday was called off, it was extremely heartening to anyone interested in student activities to see the great amount of interest and enthusiasm aroused by the Carnival. We can promise everyone that the Carnival will go on as planned at a later date this spring, to be announced as soon as arrangements can be completed, since we feel that the Carnival will be a large and definite contribution to life at Penn State.

We wish to thank all participating organizations for their hard work in making ready for the Carnival, and to thank especially the members of Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity, for turning out a large number of men at 6:30 a.m. ready to help with the work of setting up.

The Carnival committee hopes that each organization entering a booth will be ready when the Carnival is again scheduled. All arrangements will remain the same, except for the weather. Watch for the early announcement of the new Carnival date.

Needed — $3000

TO THE EDITOR: Next week, April 4-9, the annual World Student Service Fund drive will be held. Penn State's goal this year is $3000, an amount often paid for a name band at Rec Hall. Of this, $2400 will be earmarked for textbooks and student supplies in the Philippines and will cover the minimum student needs in that nation. The rest will go into a WSSF general fund to be used for emergencies.

This is an excellent opportunity to help students in another country who are sadly in need of textbooks and supplies. It is a drive in which students and faculty are the main contributors. For that reason we have a special responsibility.

So when you give, think of the immense possibilities that your contribution will have—not only to give hundreds of other students an education, but to tremendously increase good will for the students of Penn State.

—Don Copelin, Mark Elcan, Co-Chairmen, WSSF.

Student Work Agency

TO THE EDITOR: Since the beginning of political campaigns, there seem to be many discrepancies as to what has been done by whom. Most noticeable of these is the origin of the Student Work Agency. At this time let it be known that the Agency first had its conception and initiation through the activities of the State Party with the sanction of All-College Cabinet. To uphold this statement here is a history of the Agency.

More than a year ago, Tom Lannen, then All-College President, appointed a committee composed of Abram Bosler, chairman; Jean Faust and Robert Gabriel, State Party candidate for All-College President. This committee worked in conjunction with Mr. Leetch, head of Student Placement, and Mr. Reece, head of Student Employment.

After numerous meetings, Reece and Bosler made a summer trip to Cornell and Princeton, the purpose being to discover how similar agencies operated. Information having been gathered, the following fall found Bosler and Reece setting up the actual physical establishment of which the News Agency is an integral part. The College Administration gave them the "Green Light" and the Agency became a reality.

Students can be proud of this Agency and also proud of the fact that student government was responsible for its establishment.

—E. Jeff Hathaway, Publicity Chairman, State Party.

'How Come You Do Me Like You Do—Do—Do?'

No Exceptions, Please

The NAACP is conducting a membership campaign which runs through next week. A distinct note of apathy is apparent among Penn State students. Most of them seem to feel, "We live in the North; this affair is too remote to concern us."

Many students are in sympathy with the aims of the NAACP, but they say there is nothing they can possibly do to change the status quo.

Both of these ideas are basically wrong!

Actually, the situation of the Negro is not essentially different in the North. Oh, yes, the laws protecting him are stricter; he attends mixed public schools; public transportation is at his disposal. But laws alone can't do everything. Even in the "more progressive" North, a Negro cannot walk into a State College barber shop to have his hair cut.

Why should people want to do anything about this? The answer is so obvious that many have overlooked it. It's a wonderful thing to say "All men are created equal." It's even more wonderful to treat all in this way. The snarl comes with the addition of one word—except.

"All men are created equal—except." Except who? Except the Negro? Except the foreign-born? Except the Mongoloid? There is no limit to this; the exceptions can be broken into infinite categories.

The only way to halt this is to eliminate all exceptions in the first place. NAACP is working to do just that.

Spring Fiver

We are the victims of a bargain. Just exhibit a reduced price on any item and there we go, reaching into our pockets to spend those few cents reserved for the afternoon's "hot-dogging."

Yesterday morning we trudged over to the TUB to check on a B-X story, but by the time the interview was over, we left with much more than we bargained for. Lee Burns, of the Book Exchange, greeted us and then said, "It's a shame the students don't support their store. That pinball machine over there makes more money than we do."

Burns then pointed out the new pennants the student co-operative store had received and remarked, "Naturally you know that everything here actually costs you 20 per cent less than the marked price."

"Every time you buy an article, you receive a sales slip," he continued, "and in May you can redeem the slips for one-fifth of their total value."

By that time he had us convinced and we whipped out a dusty wallet and bought the biggest, strongest and most attractive notebook on campus.

We kept right on buying supplies and talking to Lee.

As we strolled down the mall with a cloth-covered notebook emblazoned "PENN STATE" in bold white letters under our arms, we carefully tucked the sales slips in the wallet and—you know, in just half an hour we had made 30 cents.

Edit Brief

● Students may have had the laugh on the faculty Tuesday night, but with the flurry of blue-books this week and next, the profs, as usual, have the last laugh.

● At least one prof proved himself above classroom orthodoxy during the Fred Waring salute of Penn State: a member of the class brought a portable radio. The nature of the course allowed this innovation without the slightest hindrance to learning.
