

PENN STATE GOES CARNIVAL HAPPY

Photography by Stuart Montgomery, Staff Photographer

The pingpong ball drops harmlessly, but Phi Kappa Psi John Doyle gives out with a free grimace anyway. Fellow target Link Van Sichel grins winningly as patrons give him a rest from being shot.

These coeds provided the Carnival with its share of cheesecake at Alpha Epsilon Phi's "Getting Getrie's Garter." Playing "Gertie" are Connie Feldman and Shirley Gahuse. Harriet Rubenstein gives tosser Sue Stern vocal encouragement.

John Brukner didn't know what he was getting into when he tried the Acacias' Ring-a-Duck booth. He won, and joined 24 other winners who wandered around asking, "What do you feed a duck?"

The Delta Chi booth, aptly entitled "Splat!", proved that Penn State has more than its share of sadists. Someone has just scored a direct hit on victim Jack Young's forehead. Jack, typical of Delta Chi's bespattered pledges, kept grinning through it all.

Pi Kappa Alpha's handsome males tried selling their kisses for a change. They were pretty lonely most of the afternoon and evening, but Jack Plat's charms did attract Rusty Riley, with interesting results.

Dick Moore points a skeptical finger at "husky" Dick Hall and curvaceous Cindy Doan in the Photo Shacke run by Pi Kappa Phi.

Dick Brossman and Marlin Weaver of Collegian make up a headline, while John Erickson coos softly in Sissie Glitteman's receptive ear. Printer Arni Gerton stepped out for a coke, missed meeting the photographer.

Tom Ward goes into the drink as Hal Showalter provides the push. Crowds laughed at the Theta Chis' antics all day, especially when IFC proxy George Chapman was occupying the chair.
