since he was old enough to swing a golf club.

He caddied during his grade school years and picked up valuable advice from such link notables as Sam Parks, National Open Champion in 1935, and well-known Arnold Palmer.

"I know Palmer well," says Tom, "we often play together at the Latrobe Country Club."

GOLF CAPTAIN

Playing on his high school golf team, the Smith-captained Greensburg golfers won the mythical state golf title in 1943. After his sophomore year he attended Staunton Military School before entering the Navy for a two-year stretch.

Coming to Penn State last year, he teamed up with his brother Jerry to lead the Lions to their first EIGA title.

"It was during last year's sectional playoffs at Oakmont that I played one of my best games," the five-foot seven-inch Smith tells, "Army's Clayton Moran had me four down with only five holes to go. I finally beat him on the 22nd hole."

OLD TIMER

Stealing into the golf limelight is nothing new for Tommy. He was crowned Greensburg Club champion in 1943, the youngest golfer ever to win that title. He was also a finalist at the West Penn tourney at Pittsburgh.

Although his fraternity broth-

James Fish Wins Top Honors At Annual Ag Hill Dairy Show

James Fish, a sophomore who never previously competed in any kind of show, swept the show and fitting honors in the Holstein class, and then went on to become the grand champion fitter and reserve champion showman in the annual dairy show held last Saturday in the Ag Hill pavilion.

Experience gained in 4-H Club activities helped bring honors to other champions as Edgar Loy, a junior, carried off grand champion showman laurels, and H. Donald Lash, a sophomore, won reserve champion fitter as well as breed and class honors.

Milking Contest

Dr. Don J. Josephson, head of the dairy department, won the faculty milking contest, a new event this year. Dr. Josephson managed to squirt 1.9 pounds of milk into the narrow opening of a quart bottle to nose out faculty members from five other departments of the School of Agriculture. The agronomy staff's representative, B. N. Driscoll, took second place, and Dr. Russell E. Larson, of horticulture, third.

In the coeds milking contest, Darlene Hoover, a home economics student, was upset by her cow, but jumped back from the tank to defeat eight other contestants.

Breed champions in the production division were: Jerseys, Edgar Loy for showing and Helen Dickerson, the only coed competing, for fitting; Guernseys, Robert Gregory, showing; and Donald Lash, fitting; Holsteins, James Fish, both showing and fitting; Brown Swiss, George Deer, showing, and Everett Stephens, fitting; Ayrshires, William Urash, showing; and Harvey Bean, fitting.

Robert McKown, champion last year, was announced winner of the dairy cattle judging contest, with Gene Harding and Ralph Anderson placing second and third, respectively.

Ice Cream Event

In the dairy manufacturing division, Leonard R. Matatic took first and Obie Snider second in the ice cream event and the sweepstakes award. Winners of the ice cream mold contest were Clarence Astleford, JoAnne Engman, and Irene Sloat, in that order.

For ice cream and milk judging, William L. Leim won both the milk and sweepstakes awards in the amateur division. Harold Wilson took first with ice cream. For the professional division, Obie Snider took first and Leonard Matatic second.
