Wearing of The Grey Aura of Mystery To New Coeds

One of the familiar sights on campus about which there seems to be an aura of mystery is the "wearing of the grey," the grey hats worn by approximately 100 upperclass coeds.

Comments to the effect that these hats are freshmen dinks or worn to indicate freshmen girls who have erred have been overheard.

In reality the hats signify girls who have been outstanding for their scholarship, leadership, and character.

Although the campus has three such organizations for women, Mortar Board, Chimes, and Cwens, which choose their members on this basis, Cwens and Chimes are the two which wear hats as a distinguishing symbol.

Although Mortar Board is a member of Hat Societies Council, which is composed of all campus honoraries for both men and women, its members wear no evident mark to designate their group as an honorary organization with the exception of the pin, a small replica of a Mortar Board.

All Chimes and Cwens, including active and inactive members, are entitled to wear a hat. Both honoraries' chapeaus are grey with their respective symbol on

Dean's Office Sets Dating Privileges

Information concerning women's dating privileges and hours for the remainder of orientation week was issued by the dean of women's office yesterday.

Freshman women may have ten o'clock permissions for the rest of the period, which includes today, tomorrow, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday nights. WSGA's regulation prohibiting association with men will not take effect until next Wednesday when classes begin. Freshman women, however, are required to attend the football game on Saturday without escorts. In addition they may not go to fraternity houses.

Sophomores, juniors and seniors will observe regular hours during the weekend. This includes one o'clock permissions tonight and tomorrow night. On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday upperclass women will be allowed eleven o'clocks.

Alpha Lambda Delta, national freshmen women's honorary, chooses its members solely on scholarship. It, however, does not belong to Hat Societies Council.

Wednesday of each week is set aside by the Council as the day hats are to be worn by all "hat" honoraries.

Coed...

Corner

By Connie Keller

An old time situation is somewhat reversed as approximately 1200 new women students have enrolled at the College and only a slight number over 600 old timers are here to make them feel at home.

Cwens, Chimes, Mortar Board and Alpha Lambda Delta have done their best in orientating these new coeds to campus life at the College, however, that peculiar and satisfying personal welcome and interest, which can mean so much to a new student in completely adjusting herself, may very well be missing.

Big-Little Sisters

In setting up the Big Sister-Little Sister system, WSGA hoped to devise a plan whereby this personal interest could be supplied. Past examples of the system have shown it to be susceptible to defeat. That defeat is not, however, a necessary evil of the system. Rather it is a lack of true interest on the part of College women to recognize a worthwhile tradition and a further lack on their part in fulfilling their obligations.

Bigger Challenge

The challenge is far bigger this year than ever before. Most coeds have been assigned two little sisters and the task has become doubly hard. Doubly hard if visiting, giving needed advice, a little friendly companionship and cheerful company can be classified that way.

Coeds had a chance to release themselves from accepting a little sister by signing in the dean of women's office last year if they did not care to have one or were for some reason unable to have one. Most, in the College spirit, accepted. The acceptance and challenge are still those of the old timers.
