

Ex-Dean Warnock Saw Growth Of College During His Tenure

"I doubt if the past 30-year period has even been duplicated in more than a very few American colleges and universities," Arthur R. Warnock, emeritus dean of men, said last week in looking back on the past three decades at the College.

The community of State College also has grown in the years that Dean Warnock has been a resident, and he has played a major part in its development until his retirement Sept. 1.

"The growth in size and stature and the variety of experiences, vicissitudes, and enjoyable pleasures for faculty and students alike have made this period memorable and distinctive," the former dean, who came to the College in 1919, added in an interview. "It will never happen at Penn State again, for the boy has grown up."

Indifferent

"Somehow or other," he recalls, "when we came here, people didn't seem to be having a very good time. They weren't snobbish, just indifferent."

The former dean found there were many small circles in the community and he set out to enlarge the circles into community-wide affairs. This project provided the inspiration that led him into many community enterprises.

As dean of men, he has had his fingers in student activities. He believes that a college student can do more than anyone will give him credit for doing, if given the chance.

Operating on this theory, he has built the student government system at the College into what has become a model for many colleges. He also has done much for fraternities, especially in raising their scholastic standards. Dean Warnock gained recognition in national fraternity circles and currently is educational adviser to the National Interfraternity Council.

Has Moved

Dean Warnock has moved from his campus home to a comfortable little cottage bordering the College farms on Puddintown road. Across the road a small stream winds its way through a meadow, while in the distance rises the legendary and always majestic Mount Nittany.

The son of an Illinois farmer, Dean Warnock studied law at the University of Illinois, was admitted to the bar, then deserted the legal profession to teach English and serve as assistant to Thomas Arkle Clark, dean of men at his alma mater.

Family Life

While at Illinois he married the former Geraldine Fouche. They have two children, Capt. Arthur Warnock, now with the Air Force at Rome, N.Y., and John F. Warnock, of State College.

"When we moved to Pennsylvania," he explains, "we intended to return to Illinois at the end of five years. But when the time came, we didn't even seriously consider returning."

He also reveals that during the first six months in State College he regretted his decision to come here.

"It was a tough winter with 100 sleighing days," the former dean recalls. "But it was followed by a million-dollar spring and we have never since regretted our decision to come to Penn State and these beautiful Pennsylvania hills."

BX in Operation Again This Year.

School supplies again are offered for sale at the student-operated BX which opened its doors Saturday. The co-operative store, located in the TUB, will be open daily from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Last semester's policy of giving students a 20 per cent rebate on all purchases made there will be continued.

Also in operation is the student book exchange, located in the same room as the BX. Students who wish to sell books may leave them at this exchange to be sold. The exchange is run on a non-profit basis.

There is still a need for students to work as clerks in the store. Anyone interested in working there should submit his name at the BX or should contact Robert Gabriel at Pi Kappa Phi.

Small Fire Occurs In Water Tunnel

A small fire in stored construction material occurred in the new Navy water tunnel on N. Atherton street, at 5:05 p. m. Saturday and was extinguished by the Alpha Fire Company before it caused much damage.

The fire, apparently caused by a short circuit in an extension cord, was discovered on the first floor of the northwest section in a pile of cartons of welding rods and filters. Little damage was reported with merely the cardboard boxes being burned.

The fire company responded to the alarm and used water from the booster tank to extinguish the blaze. The company was delayed in reaching the scene of the fire by traffic jams caused by crowds streaming away from the Villanova-Penn State football game.

Seek Labor Peace

PITTSBURGH—CIO steelworkers representatives and big steel officials were making a strong effort here today to forestall any critical work stoppage. They have until Saturday to arrive at a decision if they want to keep one million employees at the furnaces and assembly lines.

Colored Flags Give Local Weather Forecast

No need now for home weather forecasting instruments on campus.

One glance at the Mineral Industries building will give an indication of weather conditions 12 hours in advance.

A system of colored flags, selected to indicate the weather forecast for this area, was installed last year. The flags are flown from the roof of the "MI" building.

When a white flag appears, fair weather is expected. But a blue and white one foresees rain. As would be expected, a red flag indicates warmer conditions, and blue, a fall in temperature.

A cloudy day is the tale told when a red, white, and blue striped flag is flown. A red and white checkerboard sign flying from the "MI" roof signifies high winds.

Music Groups List Tryouts

Tryouts for the marching Blue Band will be held today from 9 to 11:50 a.m. and 1:30 to 2:50 p.m. in 110 Carnegie Hall.

Interested students should sign up immediately on the bulletin board on the first floor of Carnegie Hall. The Blue Band is open to all male students.

The College Symphony orchestra will hold tryouts today in 107 Carnegie Hall. The orchestra is open to all students; those interested should report to Theodore Karhan.

The Chapel Choir will hold tryouts today from 1:30 to 4:30 and from 7 to 9 p.m. in 211 Carnegie Hall. The Choir is open to all students.

Tryouts for the College Glee Club will be held today and tomorrow at 7 p.m. Those interested should report to Frank Gullo in 200 Carnegie Hall. The Glee Club is open to all male students.

Treble Singers will hold tryouts tomorrow from 7 to 9 p.m. in 117 Carnegie Hall. This organization is open to women students only.

Information concerning the ROTC Band will be posted on the bulletin board, first floor Carnegie Hall.

PSCA Opens Fall Semester With Friendship Parties

Penn State Christian Association goes into high gear tonight with its initial meeting of the fall semester. Plans have been formulated for an anticipated big year for the students of this campus.

Tonight's meeting will be in the form of a "Meet Up" party at which time opportunity will present itself to all new students for becoming acquainted with not only new students but also with the old-timers.

New Students

The doors of 405 Old Main will be open to usher in the new students to PSCA activities at 7:30 p.m. today. Old members will be there to extend hearty greetings and a warm welcome to the newcomers on campus. The atmosphere will be very informal, there will be entertainment and refreshments, and introduction of officers and explanations of the functions of PSCA.

On Saturday, the first big weekend event will be in store for the freshman girls. PSCA is sponsoring a cabin party at Watts Lodge for all interested freshman women. It is requested that all registrants for the party sign up in 304 Old Main before Thursday. There will be hiking and chatting Saturday afternoon.

Friendship Theme

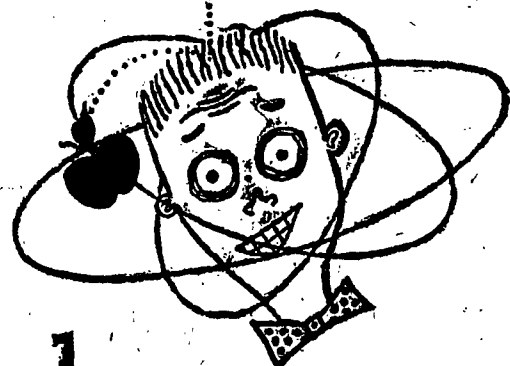

The general theme for the weekend will be friendship, with discussion and talks by various leaders. Recreation and mountain climbing will also fill the bill. Departure time for the cabin is 1:30 p.m.

PSCA, primarily a Christian organization, is established to render religious and personal help to any student on campus regardless of faith or creed. Its primary purpose is to bring the teachings of Christ to those searching for His truth. It extends greetings to all. The organization is here for all who would avail themselves of its opportunities.

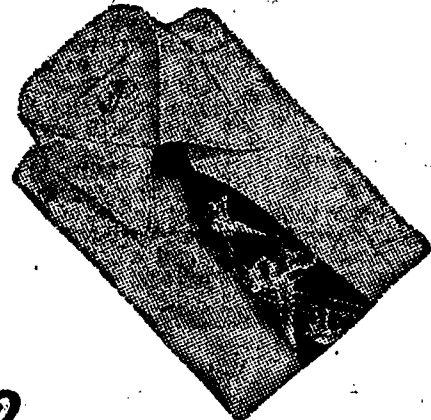

Bisons Missing

For the first time since 1933, Bucknell University is missing from the Penn State football schedule.

Two things every college man should know!

1. This is a physics major. Always up 'n atom. Learned about falling bodies from Ellery Queen—doesn't give a fig for Newton. Rides his cyclotron on fission trips.

2. This is the "Manhattan" Burt. Sound investment in solid comfort. Soft roll, button-down collar—stays neat day and night. Size-Fixt (average fabric residual shrinkage 1% or less). In white, stripes and solid colors.
