

Prof Turns Thumbs Down On Boola Boola For Moola

By RONALD BONN

"The basic danger of college football is that, as with competitive enterprise in business, once you become involved, you tend to go deeper and deeper."

So thinks Prof. Bernard W. Wayne, whose opinions on grid subjects hold special interest for students of this college because the professor's last teaching position was with the University of Chicago. That school has become famous for the "all work and no play" policy of its chancellor, Dr. Robert Hutchins.

Economics Prof

White Professor Wayne, who has just been added to the economics faculty here, holds no brief for Hutchins' uncompromising no-football stand, he is equally opposed to the subsidization practices of many schools. He says, "I think intramural and inter-collegiate football are excellent for this or any other school. I would, however, prefer to see the decline of the sport at State College, rather than have the school adopt a paid-player policy."

Although the new professor has yet to see the Lions in action, and has witnessed no inter-collegiate ball at Chicago, he is no stranger to the game. His experience is an unusual story in itself, for his last grid work was with an amateur squad in Paris, France, back in 1939, while at the Sorbonne University. Asked if the sport is popular there, he answers in a slightly awed tone, "Yes, but nothing like here?"

Student Attitude

Surprisingly enough, the student attitude towards football at Chicago is one of complete indifference. "They don't even think about it," says Professor Wayne; "they have too much work to do."

The professor is well-posted on Nittany football this year, for, talking about it, he asks indignantly, "Why the devil don't we get some reserves?" He expresses high hopes for the Boston College game tomorrow, which will be the first he has seen. Again, however, he would rather see us lose ball games than hire teams. He deprecates the current collegiate tendency to lose sight of the sport in the hunt for glory.

Banned Football

Chancellor Hutchins banned Chicago football because of an often-expressed conviction that the modern gridiron and the classroom do not mix, and that the former invariably infringes on the latter. Professor Wayne takes a middle ground. Essentially his attitude is summed up in his own sentence, "I like to see you play football, but I would also like to see you in the library."

Traffic Rules For Weekend Outlined

Weekend traffic regulations for State College were announced today.

Police Chief John R. Juba again appealed to State College residents to walk to the football game at Beaver Field and park their cars off the streets.

Parking facilities for several thousand out-of-town cars have been set up near the beef barns on the campus, two blocks from the field, and incoming traffic will be directed to the area by State Police assigned for extra duty because of the heavy volume expected.

Countians have been urged to take advantage of the campus parking by both Chief Juba and Campus Patrol Captain Philip Mark.

No north-bound traffic on Burrows street on the campus will be allowed to keep one lane open for emergency purposes. And left turns onto the campus at College and Burrows are not permitted during the rush periods.

'Welcome Willy' Sales Commence

Tickets for the Thespian show "Welcome Willy," to be presented in Schwab Auditorium October 13, 14, and 15, will go on sale at the Student Union Desk in the Lobby of Old Main at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

All seats will be reserved, and curtain will be at 8 p.m. all three nights. Tickets for the Thursday performance will sell for $1.20, tax included, and those for Friday and Saturday will be $1.20.

In order that the returning alumni will have an opportunity to see the show, no tickets will be sold to the students for Saturday's performance. As a great number of the homecoming crowd will be ex-Thespians and Masquerettes, this policy has been set up to assure them, as well as the other alumnus, a chance to see the review.

"Welcome Willy," a review in two acts and eight scenes, has been in rehearsal since orientation week. Scenery is in the process of construction, and dress rehearsals are scheduled for early next week.

Walt Eckley, who is in charge of the scenery design, has announced that the construction crew has concentrated most of its efforts on the scenery for the Atlantic By The Sea number (ala Mack Sennet) and the Calypso routine.

College Offers New Experiences For Frash Coeds

Green bow above a name card is the distinguishing characteristic of the new variety of creatures which have descended upon the Nittany habitat. Their official name is "freshmen," but because of their gender, might better be known as "fresh-women."

Interesting things happen to these characters. Witness the following tale:

One green-bowed female was standing in the hallway of Carnegie Hall, after Froth's candidate meeting, when she was approached by a male. Now all good first semester girls know that they aren't permitted to speak to boys. But, her dashing suitor was speaking in a different language when he said, "Well, baby, though you can't talk, we can converse."

With this innocent statement he grabbed her, and without further preliminaries, kissed her. What could she do? She smiled; she couldn't talk.

Ah, the language of love doesn't require mere words. Lucky freshman!

Cwens Give Prize For Best Corsage

One of the highlights of the Cwens' "Dungaree Drag" on Saturday will be awarding the prize to the girl who makes the cleverest corsage for her drag. The corsage may be made from candy, flowers, cloth, tinfoil, leaves, or any unusual material.

Gene Magill's orchestra (formerly Pat Patterson's orchestra), which played at last year's Cwen dance, will play at this affair in Rec Hall from 8:30 to 12 p.m., with Roslyn "Candy" McCollom as vocalist.

Abe Leinbach, a tenor who has sung in Thespian shows on campus, and a sophomore male vocal quartet will be featured at intermission.

An additional attraction will be refreshments for thirsty couples. Tickets at $1.50 a couple, are on sale now at the Student Union desk.

Water Tunnel--

(Continued from page one) whom the tunnel has been named. Secretary Koehler is a native of Pennsylvania, practicing law in New York and Pittsburgh before entering government service. He joined the Navy Department in 1942 and, following his release in 1945, reentered the government service. He was appointed to his present post early this year.

Preceding the dedication, a luncheon in honor of Secretary Koehler and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will be held at the Nittany Lion Inn.

Tests on the water tunnel are expected to begin early next year.

John T. Koehler

with all phases of its operation being opened to the public for inspection.

Capacity of the tunnel, which is nearly 100 feet in length, and 32 feet high, is 100,000 gallons. When filled with water, the total weight will approximate 600 tons. The inside diameter of the test section is 4 feet and the length is 14 feet.

Large plexi-glass windows will be provided on each side of the test section for observation of the models during tests. Access to the models is to be gained through a removable hatch in the top of the working section.

The water for the tunnel will be drawn from the College supply in Musser Gap, south of the College.

Steel Strike

PITTSBURGH — The steel strike is following an uneventful course. Observers say that neither labor nor management seems to be doing anything toward ending the nation-wide walkout.

At his news conference yesterday, President Truman said that the situations in both the steel and the coal disputes have not reached a point where it requires presidential intervention.

AN INVITATION

Open House will be held on Friday evening for all Evangelical United Brethren students, 8:00 p.m. at the church.

Campus Political Campaign --

In the All-College elections last Spring, the resurgent Lion party threw the then dominant State party out of power in the upper classes and the elective Cabinet posts, giving the party five seats on Cabinet. The presidents of the sophomore and freshman classes also will take seats on Cabinet.

At the present time, Kenneth Ralston, who was president of the sophomore class last year, is representing the current sophomores on Cabinet, while the freshmen are not represented directly.

Both parties will hold meetings Sunday evening to prepare for the Nov. 15 battle and to reorganize their parties.

Undergraduates interested in campus politics can become members of either party by attending clique meetings and receiving clique cards, and by working through various party committees. Whether or not he is a member of a party, every student is eligible to vote.

Parties on campus do no represent any particular special interest group, but rather are formed on lines which cross all group-interest boundaries. For the most part, the two-party system has prevailed at the College, with most attempted third parties falling through. Sometimes a third party will rise to take the place of one of the two parties out of power, but in turn will die out.

Through primaries conducted two weeks before the campus-wide elections, the political cliques name their nominees for class officers. Members of a certain class may vote only for the officers of their class and of Cabinet.

Appointed by Cabinet, an all-college elections committee has complete jurisdiction over the political campaigns through a voting code that embodies rules and penalties for balloting.

Pep Rally

(Continued from page one) coming Day festivities, next Friday, prior to the Nebraska football game, a very unusual program is being planned for the pep rally. Next week as many outstanding alumni as are available will be at the rally, along with cheerleaders, band members, and hat men, combining to make the program another outstanding attraction for the students.

Glass, MC

Hank Glass, who has attained wide-spread campus recognition because of his outstanding stage ability, will head the coming week's program. Now engaged in post graduate work, Glass has been the mainstay of several Players' productions and for the past few years has M.C.'d many important college student events.
