

Pa. Week

"Pennsylvania Has Everything" has been adopted as the official slogan for the fourth annual Pennsylvania Week being held this week.

AND PENNSYLVANIA does have practically everything. It leads the nation in production of such heavy materials as steel, pig iron, coal, stone, cement, and coke. About 99 per cent of all anthracite coal mined in America is dug right here at home. Pennsylvania leads all other states in production of shirts, hosiery, silks, ice cream, liquors, chocolate, pretzels, glass, lubricating oils, and rayon. This is done in 19,000 manufacturing plants with 1,500,000 employees.

Lancaster County has the nation's richest non-irrigated farms. Pennsylvania farmland is valued at more than a billion dollars. As a sporting grounds, the state ranks with the best in the world. Hunters average annually, 30,000 deer, 3,000,000 rabbits and 500,000 pheasants. Over 4,000 miles of forest trails cover the woodlands which make up 52 per cent of Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Week is being celebrated throughout the Commonwealth with plant open houses, news reels, radio programs, displays, parades, and a tour of the state by the Pennsylvania Week Special train. This tour will cover six days and 28 communities will be visited. Important documents and exhibits will be shown to the public throughout the week.

PENNSYLVANIA TAKES no back seat as a vacationland. The contrasts provided by the sleepy hills and the thunder of its mining and steel mill industries, its farmland and urban centers, only serve to heighten the pride of all its citizens.

We all have a date with our state.

Lost Freshmen

If you're a freshman and are enduring a "lost" feeling, perhaps Temple University is the place for you. The Temple University News recently took editorial note of a freshman camp instituted this fall by the school "to fill the void in the college life of incoming freshmen."

"School spirit," observes the News, "gets a working over."

ABERNATHY: Say, Billingsworth, wait up, I have something to ask you.

BILLINGSWORTH: What's on your mind, chum?

ABERNATHY: I saw in the paper that you were appointed chairman of NSA by All-College Cabinet last week. What's the scoop on that outfit? How come they get such a large appropriation from Cabinet funds when nobody even knows what they do? Just what is the purpose of NSA?

BILLINGSWORTH: National Student Association is a service organization, whose purpose it is to apply ideas which work in some colleges to all the rest—student government, book exchanges, purchase card plans, faculty rating systems, campus chests, student agencies rendering all kinds of services such as newspaper delivery, employment, laundry, dry cleaning, restaurants, stores for supplies, and arranging trips to Europe, South America for work, study, or travel in the summertime . . .

ABERNATHY: Hey, relax, don't get all excited at me, I just asked a civil question. But the main gripe seems to be that NSA hasn't done anything significant for a long time, and continues to receive Cabinet subsidation.

BILLINGSWORTH: What you say is not entirely wrong, for NSA last year had a very tough time with organizational difficulties, and were not as effective as they should have been. With the increased interest we expect this year, NSA should be able to apply the full power of its national organization to solving Penn State problems. You may have noticed that many of the ideas I mentioned a couple of minutes ago are already working here at State, and more coming.

ABERNATHY: Well, it's something to know that much at least, but what good is it if the nationally gathered suggestions are not brought in? Why don't you get more people working for you—it appears to me like a pretty interesting activity.

BILLINGSWORTH: Great. We're glad to have you.

ABERNATHY: Me?

BILLINGSWORTH: Sure. Maybe you don't know much about it now, but you'll soon have the inside story.

ABERNATHY: Fair enough, and let me know when you meet next time. I'll be there with bells on.

The Safety Valve . . .

TO THE EDITOR: I read Mr. Herb Stein's letter, which appeared in the October 18th issue of The Daily Collegian, with great interest. I find it very hard to account for his feelings about the bonus for World War II veterans, as it is contrary to my own, and most other veterans.

In order to better understand Mr. Stein's feelings about the matter, I would like to know a bit more about his service record. If it would not be of too great inconvenience to Mr. Stein, I would appreciate it if some facts as to his service time could be made public. I would like particularly to know, length of service, branch of service, combat time, and theater.

For some strange reason I feel that these facts might tend to influence ones status on the bonus question, as well as the amount of money he might receive.

T. H. Dahl
Ed. Note—Stein spent 16 months in the army, mostly with occupation forces in Japan. Not a combat veteran, and therefore not entitled to the proposed bonus, he holds that Pennsylvania has more pressing needs than a vets' bonus. One-third of the vets' response to Stein's editorial so far has been in agreement. Two-thirds against.

Tracking Down Tales

With The Staff

Somebody who prefers to remain known as "S. S." dropped the Collegian a card after seeing last week's Thespian production.

He said: "Just saw the Thespian's 'Welcome Willy' and found it to be a well planned entertainment menu—A good dash of spice; large amounts of sweet corn; unlimited quantities of luscious tomatoes; plenty of beef, and for desert, a large portion of cheese cake.

A small troupe of Blue Band members made the rounds of the various houseparties on Saturday night to serenade alumni. As the evening progressed, the music was off key, but the bandsmen were feeling much happier. The outfit was made up of Bill Boyles, Hub Haugh, George Black, Tim Baker, Larry Wexlin, Ken Feher, Tom Yoder, Lloyd Murray, and Charles Crispen.

Pat McKnight, McElwain coed, is searching for a recipe for roasted peanuts. When her boy friend, who is working in Florida, asked her what she wanted him to send her, Pat said, "Oh, something different."

A week later 100 pounds of unroasted peanuts arrived.

After their "Men of Distinction" dance last Spring, Alpha Tau Omega must have been serious about continuing a distinctive atmosphere. The fraternity's pledge list last week listed two cinema names among ATO's pledges—Ronald Coleman and Robert Montgomery.

Ex-Penn Stater, Fred Stabley, now a Michigan State sports editor, has continued sending to the Collegian sports staff an ever increasing amount of press releases. This material now totals approximately 65 typewritten sheets, or about 20,000 words.

An appreciative Collegian sports staff has also received a 58-page booklet on Michigan State football.

During sorority ribboning this week, tradition was thrown to the winds when the Corner Room became overcrowded with members showing off their new pledges. Some sororities had to leave the Corner Unusual to seek other spots to show off their newly-ribboned gals.

Intended for a Collegian news brief . . . In a jovial vein, Beta Omicron Omicron Zeta Epsilon honorary submitted their list of newly elected officers, 21 in number. Social gatherings for the group are held on Saturday nights.

Which twin was the phony? Jack Weidenman came to a Com 24 class for his identical twin, Ted. Jack had had the course last semester, and asked the prof a question concerning a problem which had not come up in the class before this semester. With appropriate discretion, the prof explained that the matter had been questioned in years before, but that the solution had not been found.
