

Trabue Calls Dewey 'Great'

Dr. M. R. Trabue, dean of the School of Education at the College, yesterday hailed John Dewey as one of the greatest men America has produced.

His statement was made in connection with John Dewey Week, being observed this week at the College and throughout the nation. It marks the 90th birthday of the Vermont-born educator.

"John Dewey's greatness lies, not in any material things produced, but in the rich insights he has developed with regard to man's relationships with the institutions he has created," Dean Trabue said.

"Recognizing social, political, economic, and industrial institutions as agencies developed by men to serve their fundamental life needs, Dewey tests each such agency, organization, custom, or program by the extent to which it develops the abilities of the people concerned to work out still more effective schemes to serve the common welfare."

"Unless an organization is developing the abilities of its members to improve their programs for the common welfare, it is, in Dewey's judgment, ineffective and undesirable," Dean Trabue said. "In this point of view, Dewey has provided a compass by which men may safely steer the development of democratic institutions."

curriculum when he entered the center. He had always liked physics and math and thought he had chosen the field he was best suited for.

But in the classroom, he found his mind wandering when the prof stopped speaking of great engineering feats performed by men who had sat in the same seat Sam occupied and got down to the business of intricate formulas and problems.

More Troubles

The same thing happened when he sat down in his room at night to struggle with his slide rule. It was always late when Sam called it a day and put his "slip-stick" back in its case.

Somehow he managed to squeeze through that first semester, but when the results of his second semester work came out both he and the dean of his school knew that Sam was a confirmed member of the misplaced student's party.

Naturally he was discouraged and ashamed. That is, until his case was taken up by the DIR.

First he was given "screening" tests with a group of students from any number of curricula. When these test results were studied, Sam was subjected to a battery of additional "specialized" tests.

Change Course

The DIR man told him that he just wasn't "cut out" to be an engineer, but should be able to average 2.10 if he switched to C & F. He was also told that results tabulated by DIR show that their predictions have proven strikingly accurate in the past.

Happy in his new work, Sam was able to remove himself from the Division within one semester by exceeding the 1.2 required of him. His average was 1.87.

least once before sending a notice to Tribunal.

For the benefit of defendants, Keller defined the campus area as extending from Burrows road to Curtin road. The designated parking area on east campus, he said, is Shortlidge road north of Pollock on the west side or in other words—alongside the TUB.

Keller also disclosed that Tribunal has recommended to Wilmer E. Kenworthy, assistant to the president in charge of student affairs, that no students be allowed to park anywhere on the campus after Jan. 1.

On that date, he said, all campus permit tags are to be collected and reissued. It is hoped that a more equitable distribution of tags can be made, Keller continued, but the surest method to alleviate the traffic problem is to keep all student cars off of the campus.

Lecturers

Forum Series Set to Begin In December

The Community Forum series for this year probably will get underway sometime in December, Eugene Fulmer, chairman of the program committee, reported yesterday.

Ralph W. McComb, chairman for the series, reported at the same time that work on the lecture programs was progressing rapidly. Mr. Fulmer stated that several outstanding speakers already have been contacted concerning appearances in lectures here.

Other members of the executive committee are Jo Hayes, ticket sales; E. W. Callenbach, speaker courtesy; Woodrow Bierly, publicity; Mrs. M. N. McGeary, secretary, and Dr. B. L. Alexander, treasurer.

Speakers at last year's series were: Fairfield Osborn, author of "Our Plundered Planet"; O. Spurgeon English, who discussed the Kinsey report; Quincy Howe, radio news analyst; Stanley K. Hornbeck, former head of the State Department's Far East division, and Ellis Arnall, former governor of Georgia.

500 Students Vote

the lobby of Main Engineering building.

Mineral Industries

Highest percentages were registered in the School of Mineral Industries and the School of Physical Education and Athletics, with the former polling 21 percent—more than 85 out of 400 eligible—and the latter getting out 20 percent of the voters—32 out of 105.

One senior and four sophomores will be elected by MI students with balloting in the main lobby of the Mineral Industries building. A sophomore man, a sophomore woman and a freshman woman will be elected in Phys Ed, with men voting in Irvin Hall lobby and women in the lobby of White Hall.

Chem-Phys

In the School of Chemistry and Physics, for which voting is held in the main lobby of Osmond laboratory, only about 55 of 778 eligible students voted, a percentage of seven. One pre-medical student, one science student and two chemical engineering students will be elected.

One freshman and one sophomore are to be named in the School of Home Economics. Only 12 percent voted yesterday in the lobby of the Home Economics building—about 45 out of 282 eligible.

Pittman Awarded Oil Painting Prize

Hobson Pittman, who has been teaching oil painting at the College for the past 17 summers, won third prize of $700 in the annual invitation exhibition, "Painting in the United States, 1949" at the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh.

Commenting on the painting, Howard Devree, writing in the New York Times, stated that Pittman "continues exploring a vein of romantic nostalgia in his 'Spring Festival.'"

"In his typical soft color and caressing brushwork, Pittman depicts the airing of sundry household spreads and covers on clotheslines outside a superannuated Victorian mansion."
