

IRC Presents United Nations Model Meeting

A United Nations Security Council model was presented by the International Relations Club in room 121 Sparks, Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The model, entitled "The Spanish Question," was directed by Dr. Larry Leonard. It was the first of a series.

The discussion started with the reading of the communication from the Polish Embassy stating that the existence of Franco's government was a threat to world peace. The whole council then joined the argument with each country expounding its opinion whether Fascist Spain was a domestic or world problem.

One and a half hours was the length of the discussion, but this included work on the perplexing problem which the Security Council did in seven months. Russia's use of the double veto was the highlight of the program. The result of the affair was that due to the Soviet veto, the Spanish question was dropped from the agenda so that it could be discussed at future meetings.

The setting for the model was made authentic. Flags of the many nations, secretaries, representatives of the Secretary General, microphones, the round table and the use of foreign languages gave the desired atmosphere.

Robert Keller, representing Australia, and Christine Altenburger, representing Russia's Mr. Gromyko, engaged in heated debates throughout. Much interest was shown by all the participants, and they enjoyed their portrayals.

The people who took part and the country they represented were Blair Green, Kuo Hao Hu, Richard Zahner, China; Fred Hopkins, Pete Hammer, France; Lamar Southan, David Fitzcharles, United Kingdom; Leonard Kolasinski, Max Einkenkel, United States; Christine Altenburger, Jack Palmer, Paul Kritsky, U.S.S.R.

Robert Keller, Phyllis Kistler, Australia; William Klisanen, Lynn Lapp, Brazil; Stanford Hertz, Jean Israel, Egypt; Allen Gracey, Drew Mahla, Mexico; Sandra Marks, John Jones, Netherlands; Rosemary Delahanty, Charles Edwards, Jerry Lacinis, Poland; and George Keenan, Representative Secretary General.

The attendance at this worthwhile project was disappointing, but Dr. Leonard believes the weather prevented some students from attending. The club sponsored a tea in the Home Economics Building following the presentation of the model.

Students To See United Nations

Fourteen students will go on the United Nations Assembly tour at Lake Success, New York, tomorrow.

The tour, which is sponsored by the Penn State Christian Association, will include attending the Assembly Thursday and Friday and meeting with members of the Security and Trustee Councils, the Political Committee and the Economic and Social Committee.

Sight-seeing trips through Chinatown, Greenwich Village and other sections of New York are also scheduled for the tour.

Students who will make the tour are: Francis Artley, Robert Boyce, Emory Brown, Byrd Burton, Dorothy Davis, Phyllis Ginsburg, Ruth Peterman, Mary Pullen, William Renshaw, LaVern Seth, Myrna Tex, Edward Wetherald, Priscilla Wilson and Louise Wolfe.

The group will be accompanied by Dr. Paul Selsam, professor of European history, who will act as faculty consultant. Marjorie Allen, associate secretary of the CA, and Luther Harshbarger, executive secretary, will also accompany the group.

The students will leave from the campus at 1 p.m. tomorrow and return Sunday.

Hazleton Gym Fund Plans Set

Plans for a fund-raising drive for a new gym at the College center at Hazleton were announced at the dedication ceremony held at the center to mark the acquisition of Highacres, the former Markle estate, as the new campus for the center.

The fund-raising drive will be sponsored by the Hazleton Educational Council. Officials at the center have already authorized laying of the foundation of the gym. The new gym will be 60 feet by 120 feet and will seat 1500 students. An armory, classrooms, offices, showers and lockers will be added on two sides.

J. O. Keller, assistant to the president in charge of Extension, delivered the dedication address. Edgar C. Weichel and Fred E. Bittenbinder, trustees of the College, and David B. Pugh in charge of instruction in Central Extension spoke at the dinner following the dedication.
