

Hop Decision

All-College Cabinet's action on the Soph Hop produced screaming headlines in the Daily Collegian: "Sophomores Must Vote To Attend Soph Hop." This prompts a question in our mind about freedom of ballot.

BY DECIDING THAT only sophomores who voted in yesterday's class election could obtain tickets for the Hop, Cabinet is resorting to a dictatorial step to assure a large turnout at the polls. The turnout was large, but it probably would have been that without Cabinet's action, because of the unusual political enthusiasm displayed this year on campus.

Regardless of the apparent effectiveness of Cabinet's action, and regardless of the quite acceptable reward for voting—a free dance ticket, Cabinet's action to force a large vote has little to be proud of in the light of democracy and simple voting rights.

It is akin to telling a child he can't go to the movie till he does his piano lesson. Dictatorial action in parent-child relationships is necessary, but has no place in college student elections.

THE RIGHT TO vote certainly includes the right not to vote.

State Sweeps Elections ---

lots for both Haines and Shoemaker. Although Shade, who announced the results at 7:30 last night, would not state how many votes the independent had received, according to the tabulations he could have garnered 324.

Under elections rules, Sarantopoulos' votes were not counted; this had been announced in advance of the elections.

John Baron won the secretary-treasurer post for the Staters with 1,027 votes against 761 for Lois Pulver of the Lion party. Miss Pulver's vote was the largest polled by any candidate.

Sarantopoulos last night refused to make any statement to the Daily Collegian concerning why he had electioneered independently at the polls. He said a statement would be issued later.

Shade said that prior to the election he had telephoned Sarantopoulos and explained why he, under the code, could not run and that his write-in ballots would not be counted. He said Sarantopoulos had admitted then and all yesterday that he legally had no place on the ballot.

"Legally, he was not allowed in Old Main to electioneer. He was defrauding the students who voted by giving them the impression that his ballot would be counted," Shade declared.

Sarantopoulos maintained yesterday afternoon that he and his associates had told persons to whom they gave stickers that the vote would not be counted. Shade denied this, reporting that many voters had told the elections committee that the persons giving them the stickers had said the votes would be counted as valid.

Shade said Sarantopoulos was also violating a rule of the College by having a sign in the Old Main lobby, because approval of the administration must be received before a sign can be posted.

The sign and distribution of the stickers caused a brief uproar in the lobby yesterday morning, with Shade ordering that the sign be removed and that the independents cease handing out stickers.

After a heated discussion, into which All-College President Ted Allen, and George Donovan, manager of Associated Student Activities, entered, Sarantopoulos removed the sign.

However, stickers were distributed throughout the day despite repeated warnings that distribution must stop, Shade said.

Sarantopoulos contended that, since his group was not recognized as a party by the elections committee, the elections code did not apply to him. He said that he had removed the sign of his own volition, in order to end the disturbance created by the people who gathered about during his dispute with Shade, Allen and Donovan.

The write-in movement was ruled out because, under the code, a person must be nominated within a campus clique to be considered a candidate, and must be approved by the elections committee at least six days before the election.

to the polls.

Apparently nine persons failed to vote for anyone for freshman class president, the tabulation showed. A total of 295 ballots were cast for the other two votes, but only 286 women voted for the class president.

Perfect Solution

TO THE EDITOR: We think that we have the solution for dateless co-eds. Why not have a week set aside wherein the men are not allowed to ask girls out? During this week it will be the privilege of the girls to make the dates. I'm sure that there are many girls (we are two examples) who will find this a great advantage in getting acquainted with a certain fellow. This may also be an advantage for the men who, to their surprise, may learn that certain girls have been thinking about them.

We think that this plan will meet with much greater approval than the "dating bureau" where you can't tell what you will get.
