

Outstanding Seniors

Bernard Carbeau

(This is the seventh of a series of articles concerning prominent senior men and women who have proved themselves outstanding in one or more fields of activity at the College).

By MYRNA TEX

"I'm probably the only commerce and finance student to be found up on Ag Hill," Ben Carbeau laughed, "but, you see, I intend to be general manager of our farm after graduation and am combining several agriculture courses with my major."

Carbeau is president of his fraternity, Beta Theta Pi. He is serving as a student representative on the Senate Committee of the 1951-52 College calendar.

"I wish more students could realize what lies behind the making of a college calendar," Carbeau said, "and how many factors are taken into consideration. Each class has to have an equal number of meetings and, after all, there are just so many days in a school year in which we have to include all the various events and school vacations."

Sophomore Year

As a sophomore, Carbeau was active on the Sophomore Orientation committee which formulated plans for orientating the next sophomore class. He is now a cheerleader, an associate Player and a member of Skull and Bones.

Last year he was the fraternity representative to IFC and this year he is again on the Council automatically since he is president of his house. He is a member of the Lion party and belongs to the Penn State Flying Club.

"Any student who desires to learn how to fly should take advantage of the Flying Club," Carbeau said. "It enables one to secure a license for only $140 while, ordinarily, its costs about $400." He flew home to Ellwood City last weekend in order to bring his girl friend here for a visit. "Flying can come in very handy," he remarked.

Favorite Sport

Carbeau stated that football is his favorite sport, but he enjoys basketball, too. "I'd like to see more cheering at the basketball games. When our team is ahead, it's tough to get a cheer from the spectators, but when the score is close the students are more cooperative."

"We need better spirit and more sportsmanship. The referees should have the final decision without the benefit of the students' feelings and reactions. Good spirit and sportsmanship at basketball games would give a better name to Penn State and create a better feeling inside and outside of the school."

Three Exchange Frosh Enrolled at Centers

Three foreign students are enrolled at Penn State Centers this fall — two in Harrisburg and one in DuBois.

Norman Yu from Hongkong, China, and Abraham B. Gruszecki, from Aruba, Dutch West Indies, are freshmen at the Penn State Center in Harrisburg. Phillip Bosch, of Hato Rey, Puerto Rico, is a freshman at the Penn State Center in DuBois.

An agricultural economics major, Norman Yu was born in Shanghai and attended schools in China, Cuba, California, and New York. In 1941 he came to the United States with his family to escape the Japanese.

He spent 1944-1945 in Havana, Cuba, where his father, a graduate of the School of Business Administration of Harvard University, started a branch of the Bank of China. In addition to relatives in California, Norman has a sister attending Wellesley College in Massachusetts.

Christmas Eve, 1941

The Chinese student relates an interesting incident which occurred to his father on Christmas Eve, 1941, when he was in a concentration camp.

"On that night my father was thinking it was certainly the worst Christmas Eve he had ever spent. Suddenly, he heard a voice calling his name and turned to see the Japanese mathematics teacher who taught him at Harvard. The teacher recognized my father because he was his favorite student."

"This professor came back to Japan during the war and worked for the Japanese government. He had an official position in the concentration camp and allowed my father the liberty to leave any time. The math professor even let him escape taking 15 others with him."

The student from Puerto Rico, Phillip Bosch, was born in Long Island City of parents of Spanish descent, but was taken to Puerto Rico at the age of two when his father, a Penn State graduate in civil engineering, decided to prospect for gold.

In Puerto Rico, Phillip promoted

baseball and basketball teams but was most interested in weight lifting.

College Rooters

"There are many Penn State men in Puerto Rico who always listen to radio broadcasts of the football games," Phillip says.

Abraham B. Gruszecki, from Aruba, Dutch West Indies was born in Poland. His family moved to Aruba where his father became a clothing merchant.

Following his graduation on the island, Abraham attended Rutgers Preparatory School to learn the Dutch language. From there he was admitted to Penn State in the pre-medical curriculum.
