MILK SHAKE AND COEDS—Dr. Milton Eisenhower, who has a reputation for enjoying milk shakes, has a chocolate shake yesterday morning in the Old Main lounge with four Penn State coeds. Shown with him are (l. to r.) Eugenie Deger, Ina Epstein, Susan Neuhauser and K. Elizabeth Eby. Commenting on the shake, made at the TUB, he said, "They make them just as good in Pennsylvania as they do in Kansas."

Pres. Pleased ---

Dr. Eisenhower was pictured during the day greeting various students, and having a milkshake with several coeds. The latter stemmed from an earlier promise by the president-elect to the entire student body: "We might have that milkshake together—but please, a literal one!"

Policy Stand

Queried by about 20 press representatives from the College, town and state, Dr. Eisenhower parried several questions about major policies with the statement that he was not prepared to speak on such matters until after he takes up residence as the College's chief executive in July.

However, he did point out generally that "an educational institution's foundation is integrity, and that integrity should be evident in all branches of the institution." This was prompted by a question about policy on athletic subsidization and the "sanity code."

"I have always hoped at Kansas State that athletics should be on an amateur basis as much as possible," he said.

Concerning his reported "open door" policy of being available often to see and talk with students at Kansas State, he indicated that he would carry that policy with him as much as possible when he switches colleges. "As long as I had the time and strength to continue, I wouldn't refuse someone who wants to see me."

He added fuel to nation-wide speculation about a possible sports relationship between Penn State and Columbia, where his brother Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower is president, by remarking, "I think that would be pretty good!"

Pointing out that he "loves athletics," Dr. Eisenhower kidded:

"I read in the papers that all but three of Penn State's star football athletes are graduating this year. The next day I found a clipping to that effect in my office, with a note attached, 'Will you reconsider now?'"

Dr. Eisenhower, who will deliver 42 addresses between now and the end of June, said he does not think he will be able to return to the College until he arrives permanently in July.

Keen Knowledge

He displayed a keen knowledge of the College and many student organizations and activities.

Observing that the Engineering School was located near the president's home on campus, Mr. James Milholland, chairman of the Board of Trustees, struck a cheerful note that permeated the entire press conference by joking to Dr. Eisenhower:

"The engineers are a noisy lot and the architects may keep you up nights by burning the lights long. But you'll get used to them."
