

Eisenhower --

if he would find here the same "pioneer friendship" that exists in Kansas, he told the crowd.

The Blue Band, conducted by James Dunlop, played "Men of Ohio," "The Nittany Lion," and "Victory Song." The rally closed with a Lion yell and the singing of the alma mater. About 85 members of the Blue Band played for the rally.

"The buildings are beautiful, the students first-rate and the facilities are among the finest I have seen," Dr. Eisenhower commented earlier. "It looks like it is going to be a very happy day when I move here."

He will relinquish his post at Kansas State at the end of the current semester.

Declines Comment

Dr. Eisenhower declined to comment on his plans for the College until he had more time to "get the feel of things."

"I promised the students in a telegram I would have a milk shake with them, and I had to carry out my promise," he said. Yesterday morning he had a milk shake in the Old Main lounge with four coeds, taking time out from his crowded consultative schedule.

He also made an auto tour of the campus with C. S. Wyand, administrative assistant to the president, and was greeted by students along the way.

Most of the day was taken up in consultation with assistants to the president, at which the president-elect was acquainted with College affairs.

Meets Student Leaders

In the afternoon he met for half an hour with twelve student leaders: All-College President Ted Allen; Collegian Editor Thomas Morgan; IFC President Peter Giesey; All-College Vice-President Harry MacMahon; AIM President Robert M. Davis; Tribunal Chairman Robert Keller; All-College Secretary-Treasurer James MacCallum; WSGA President Shirley Gauger; Judicial Chairman Constance Croushore; Leonides President Mary Lou Hollis; Panhellenic Council President Dolores Jelacic, and Senior Class President James Balog.

Last night he attended a welcome dinner at the Nittany Lion Inn with the council on administration, composed of assistants to the president and the various deans.

Discussion of College business will be held this morning before he leaves for Philadelphia with Milholland and Wyand. He will speak to the PMA tonight on "Education for Freedom." Then he will go to New York to visit Columbia, and tomorrow he and brother Dwight will go to Temple University in Philadelphia to receive honorary doctor of laws degrees.

"Feels Like Home"

Greeted by student leaders who met him when he arrived here from Altoona last night, Dr. Eisenhower chatted freely with them. The students told him that favorable reaction to his appointment "has swamped and shaken the Nittany valley."

"It feels like home already," he remarked after taking a quick look around the campus.

Praises Ag School

"It is my impression that a magnificent job is being done in agricultural training and research," he said.

He was met Sunday night at the Altoona railroad station by Adrian O. Morse, assistant to the president in charge of resident instruction, and was greeted at the president's house by Milholland, Kenworthy, Wyand, J. Orvis Keller, assistant in charge of extension, and Samuel K. Hostetter, assistant in charge of business affairs.

Students who chatted with him during the purely social call Sunday evening were Anna O. Keller, Robert Anderson, Dottie Werlinich and Luther.

The eleventh president of the College, he will fill the vacancy created by the death of President Ralph Dorn Hetzel in October, 1947.

"There are two kinds of presidents," he stated yesterday, "those with long beards and those without—I am the latter."

Lit Magazine Issues Request For Candidates

Students interested in filling positions on a proposed new Penn State photographic-literary magazine are requested to attend a preliminary meeting in 8 Carnegie Hall at 8:30 tonight. If approved by the Senate Committee on Student Welfare, the new publication will succeed Critique, a campus literary magazine now defunct.

The three top positions to be filled, according to Thomas Morgan, chairman of the Board of Publications, are editor, managing editor and business manager. Other essential staff positions are open in editing, advertising, photography, promotion, writing, art, circulation and business to any undergraduate students who qualify.

As yet un-named, the new magazine is being started through a boost by All-College. Cabinet after efforts by individuals to replace or revive Critique failed. "In contrast to the Old Main Bell, Portfolio and Critique—all past literary magazines," Morgan said, "this new magazine will probably stress photography to a great degree." He added, however, that final editorial policies "will be up to the editor, advised by a board of directors."

Open To Students

He emphasized that tonight's meeting is open to all interested students, regardless of class or curriculum.

A staff for this semester will be chosen soon by the Board of Publications, made up of editors of other campus publications, and a board of directors to be announced this week.

The Board of Publications was given a green light by Cabinet earlier this year to draw up a constitution and apply to the Senate Committee on Student Welfare for a charter to replace that of Critique. At the same time, Cabinet voted to lend $600 to help pay plaguing creditors of Critique. Critique's debt, inherited from the Old Main Bell and Portfolio, amounts to about $1,000. In three years, Critique whittled the debt from $1,500.

In a statement representing the Board of Publications, Morgan said, "There is no reason why this new photography-literary magazine should not click if handled with a close eye to good business and promotional practices, if dressed up with many photographs, and if made to include student literature that will be popular." He defined "popular" as meaning "not crowding too much the so-called long-hair stuff."

A constitution for the proposed magazine will be presented to All-College Cabinet Thursday for approval since Cabinet initiated the action to start
