Cedar Falls, Iowa, is the next stop for at least three members of Penn State's wrestling team—third-best in the East. Cedar Falls is the site of the NCAA tournament, which will be held March 24 and 25. Coach Charlie Speidel is still not sure how many men he will take to enter the national competition.

Placing among the three top teams for the first time since 1943, the Lion matmen put on a spirited show in the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tourney at Princeton, N. J., Friday and Saturday. The Nittanians tallied 28 points, while the team favorite, Syracuse, piled up 32, and Lehigh scored 29. It was one of the closest team races in the history of the 46-year old association.

For the second straight year, Heavyweight Homer Barr clinched the title for Syracuse. The Nittany heavy, one of the three 1949 champions to successfully defend their titles, took an 8-4 decision from Lehigh's Gus LaSasso in the final bout of the two-day run-off. Last year, Barr beat LaSasso, 10-2, in the finals and gave Syracuse a one-point team triumph over Lehigh.

Captain Jim Maurey, 145-pounder, also came through with a championship. He evened things up with Lehigh's John Mahoney, the only grappler to beat Captain Jim in dual meets this season, by winning the grand finale.

Mike Rubino failed in his bid to dethrone Syracuse's George Gebhardt from his 175-pound leadership, but it was the most unpopular decision of the two-day meet. Gebhardt won, 3-2, but his three points were awarded by Referee John Engle. When the verdict was announced the packed crowd in Princeton's Dillon (Continued on page three)

Albarano, Gross Lose in Finals

Charlie Drazenovich did it again . . . the broad-shouldered, 215-pound Nittany heavy once again exploded the dynamite stored in his mitts against the reigning National champ, Syracuse's Marty Crandell to garner his third Eastern boxing crown. The Draz also was awarded the tournament's outstanding boxer award for "his excellent ringmanship and sportsman-like conduct." In copping his third consecutive title, the Draz became the tenth boxer in 27 years of tournament competition to win three crowns, consecutive or otherwise. Penn State's Johnny Criswell at 125 pounds, and Allie Wolff, at 160, were the Lions other three-time winners.

For the second consecutive year, Syracuse won the team championship with a runaway total of 26 points. Also, for the second year in a row Penn State was runnerup. The Lions had 11 points.

Syracuse's mitt slingers copped four individual titles, Virginia two, Army and Penn State one each.

BEATS CORLETO

Drazenovich had entered the finals of the tournament deciding his old nemesis, Western Maryland's Joe Corleto. Then in the tourney's finale, he was pitted against Crandell.

After two fairly even rounds the Orange heavy uncorked a strong right to the Draz's jaw which seemed to daze Chuck momentarily. Then with only half-a-minute remaining in the final round, Chuck unleashed a most-devastating flurry of blows which sent Crandell to the canvas for a nine count.

Women's Debate Squad Tops Men In Pittsburgh

Coeds Win Second In State Tourney

It was Penn State Coeds versus Penn State at the University of Pittsburgh debate tournament last weekend.

Christine Altenburger and Rosemary Delahanty of the women's debate squad, negative speakers, met and defeated affirmative speakers Clair George and Peter Giesey of the men's debate squad in the third round of the tournament.

Both teams entered separately and were pitted against each other as a result of drawing for position.

The women's squad won six debates and lost two, and were tied for second place at the semi-finals.

Discussing nationalization of industries, affirmative speakers Shirley Gallagher and Barbara Shiffman defeated Pitt, St. Joseph's, and Mount Mercy. They lost to St. Vincent's.

In addition to defeating the Penn State men, Miss Altenburger and Miss Delahanty won over Geneva and Slippery Rock and lost to Temple.

At the conclusion of four preliminary rounds, Temple and the University of Pennsylvania each had seven wins.

The Penn State women, St. Joseph's, Allegheny, Carnegie Tech, Seton Hill, and Washington and Jefferson were tied for second place with six victories each.

Median scores for each of these teams was calculated and as a result Allegheny and Carnegie Tech entered the final round with Temple and the University of Pennsylvania.

Allegheny won the tournament in the final round and will have possession of the debate association trophy for the year.

Affirmative Speakers Richard Schweiker and W. David Lewis of the men's team defeated Slippery Rock, while Negative Speakers Clair George and Peter Giesey beat Mount Mercy and Geneva.

Coach Joseph O'Brian accompanied the men's team and Coach Clayton Schug the women's squad.

In another tournament last weekend in Brooklyn two teams from men's debate fared poorly taking two out of eight debates. Competing among 100 schools were James Dente and Nathan Feinstein, affirmative and Charles Petrie and John Mezaros, negative.

Borowy, Waters Gain Places In Eastern Swimming Meet

By ART BENNING

Rod Waters and Cas Borowy were the only individuals to place in the Eastern Intercollegiate swimming championships held at Rutgers last weekend. Waters repeated his third place victory of 1949 in the 150 yard backstroke, and Borowy took fifth place in the 50 yard freestyle.

Seton Hall upset the defending champion, Rutgers, when its trio of Glennland pool winners all turned in first place wins in the finals. In addition to first places by Kurtzman, Benza and Kozlow, the Pirates also won the 300 yard medley relay.

Rutgers took second spot, and placed two individual winners and a first in the 400 yard relay. Pitt followed Rutgers to win third spot.

TIED FOR FIFTH

Penn State tied for fifth place in the field of 15 colleges. The Lions missed Cal Folmsbee in the fancy diving. Folmsbee won third spot last season. John McGrory, Lion captain, failed to place in the star-studded distance events, after taking a fourth place last year.

Waters' time in the 150 yard backstroke was 1:44.4, and Borowy's 24.6. Lou Benza, Seton Hall, was the only double winner as he won the backstroke in 1:42.3, and the 220 yard freestyle in 2:15.3.

The Intercollegiate closed the swimming season for Coach Bill Gutteron's squad. After winning five and losing two in 1949, the Lions won three, lost five, and tied one this season, against tough competition. The Statemen bettered their winning times of last season in most events, and held all the team records, except two.

Professors Oppose Arming

Re-arming western Germany to a wartime potential was opposed, in varying degrees, by three professors of the College, at a panel discussion Friday night.

A west European army using German manpower was proposed by Dr. Neal Riemer, political science instructor. The Germans would form five infantry divisions under this plan, he said, but they would not be given separate control and no air power or atomic bombs.

"It is possible to conceive a plan of re-arming the Germans which would keep them unable to fight themselves," Dr. Richard C. Raymond, physics professor, told the group. Dr. Raymond also advocated making the German army part of western European defenses by integrating their equipment.

Dr. Walter Coutu, sociology professor, warned that re-arming Germany would be an excuse for Russia to start a shooting war. With the German general staff in control, he said, there would also be no chance for the democracy we started to create.

Commenting on his recent trip to Germany, Dr. R. Wallace Brewster, discussion moderator, said he thought the Germans did not feel responsible for the war and didn't have sufficient responsibility to foster democracy.

"You cannot arm people if you can't trust them," the political science professor concluded.

The panel was sponsored by the International Relations Club and the Liberal Arts Student Council. It was the second in a series.
