

Living Units Nominate Nine As May Queen Candidates

Nine senior women have been nominated by their living units as candidates for May Queen.

They are Leatrice Berger, Simmons; Arlene Connor, McElwain; Louise Drozdak, Co-op; Beverly Gearhart, Frazier; Teresa Gonsky, McElwain; Patricia High, Simmons; Lorraine Stotler, Grange; Victoria Williams, Simmons; and Marie Wroblewski, McElwain.

One of these girls will reign over May Day, Saturday, May 13. She and her court will be honored at the May Day dance Saturday night in Recreation Hall. Mary Conrath, junior senator, is in charge of the dance.

Elections Scheduled

Elections will be held in Old Main on April 17 and 19 for both May Queen and Maid-of-Honor. All women students are eligible to vote for both girls. The May Queen candidates were nominated by units having senior women; the Maid-of-Honor candidates will be nominated by units which have freshman women.

At the time of the elections, senior women may sign to participate in the Hemlock chain. The girls in the chain help to make it up.

Traditions Back

The appearance of freshman women on campus brings back other parts of the traditional May Day. There will be two May Poles this year: a freshman and a sophomore pole. The jesters and the heralds which are part of the ceremony will be freshman and sophomores, respectively this year. They are chosen by a special May Day committee. This committee also elects two sophomore attendants, two junior attendants, and the Honor Arch, made up of 20 senior honor women. The two runners-up for May Queen are the senior attendants.

Credit To Miss Allen For Big Strides In CA Work

Marjorie Allen's Penn State habitat is a small, rather cluttered office in the Christian-Association suite in Old Main. It's a busy place, for Marge is noted for her ability to get things done and her record here at State certainly bears this out. Since she came to the campus three semesters ago to work with the C.A., it has made great strides toward becoming the vital, active campus organization it should be, and Marge deserves much of the credit.

Marge's genial smile, as well as the rest of her person, is a product of the great state of Texas, for she was born and raised in Dallas. She stands at attention when Southern Methodist University's alma mater is played and, just to keep it in the same state, took her master's degree at the University of Texas.

English Teacher

Work on this degree was interrupted by the war, and the young student decided she should be doing something useful. The job she finally landed was that of English teacher in a small, rural high school noted for its laxness of discipline. Having had no previous preparation for teaching, Marge says the experience was a nightmare and she left after one semester firmly convinced that she was not born to teach.

Back to Texas U. she went to complete work on her master's degree. This left her summers free and the blond co-ed wasted no time putting them to good use. The summers of '45 and '46 found her on the staff at work camps in Ohio and later in Missouri. She is enthusiastic about these experiences and feels that there is no better way than this to learn to understand all kinds of people.

Relief Organizations

However, she said that the most wonderful summer she ever spent was in '47, when she went to Europe to work with the Friend's Service Committee in the rehabilitation projects in Germany and Belgium. Ever since this time she has been actively interested in war relief organizations.

The vivacious Miss Allen said that she loves sports but seldom gets time to participate in any. With the job of steering the Christian Association resting mainly on her shoulders, we can easily see why. Marge had her work cut out for her before she ever arrived and Penn State congratulates her on the difficult job which she is doing beautifully.
