Paper Names Senior Boards For Next Year

Gladfelter, Landon To Head Collegian

Dean Gladfelter and Owen Landon, both arts and letters majors, have been elected editor and business manager, respectively, of the Daily Collegian for 1950-51, according to Thomas Morgan, present editor, and Marlin Weaver, present business manager.

Business Staff

Senior business staff members, besides Landon, will include Thomas Karolick, assistant business manager; Harold Wollin, advertising director; Hugo Mandes, local advertising manager; Laura Mermelstein, promotion manager; Edward Noyes and Gerald Yeager, circulation co-managers; Edwin Singel, personnel manager; Loreta Stempinski, office manager; Winifred Wyant, secretary; and Norma Gleghorn, Delores Horne, Mary Kauffman, Sue Halperin.

Collegian senior board members are elected by the respective out-going boards, from among the junior board members. Competition is keen, Morgan said, because promotions are based on merit, with ability and interest rated high.

Assume Duties

During April the new senior boards will be indoctrinated into their individual duties by their predecessors. Actual operation of the newspaper will be assumed by the new boards on May 1.

Further move-ups, to junior board of both the editorial and business staffs, will be announced later this month.

Acheson Denies M'Carthy Claim

WASHINGTON—Secretary of State Acheson denied Senator Joseph McCarthy's statement that Owen Lattimore is the actual director of American policy in the Far East. Acheson said that he has never met Lattimore and he has never been on the State Department payroll.

Lattimore is the man McCarthy called the top Soviet spy in this country. The Wisconsin Republican claims he has documents plus an unnamed witness—to prove it. McCarthy is keeping these documents from the Senate subcommittee investigating his charges of Communism in the State Department. Acting Chairman Theodore Green (Dem. R.I.) said a subpoena may be issued against McCarthy if he continues to withhold the papers.

Lattimore, a professor at John Hopkins University, is on his way home from a UN mission in Afghanistan to answer McCarthy's charges which he has labelled "pure moonshine".

Aid Bill Passed

WASHINGTON—The House has approved President Truman's "Point Four" Program to aid the backward areas of the world. The program won approval after the House voted to cut 20-million dollars from the 45-million President Truman asked to finance it.

Foolish Coed Fools Around

Perhaps the only institutions for which the Russians do not claim origination are sex and April Fools' day, although the former, we understand, is next in line.

It has been rumored that April Fools' day is a Penn State original. It seems that the first coed ever to date a man on campus was blessed with the name April. Since April was first to fool around, we commemorate her sad folly on the most appropriate date.

Another version to do with the Penn State origin seems to be that on days such as these, from way back when, Penn Staters would stand around on corners and say, "Look, Spring is here." Naturally they were fools, and it just so happens that more fools used to gather on corners and say "Look, ect." on April 1 than any other day, so they called it April Fool's day.

By GEORGE VADASZ

Michigan State's Spartans boast a commanding lead in the team standings as the 13th NCAA Boxing show enters its final stage. One win tonight will earn them at least a tie for the team trophy.

The Spartans have accumulated 13 points, Syracuse, Idaho, and Gonzaga each have eight. Penn State and L.S.U. are tied for third spot with seven points.

Michigan State sends three men into tonight's finals, slated to start at 8 p.m. Penn State, Gonzaga, Syracuse, Maryland, and Idaho each have two men still in the running.

L.S.U., Washington State and San Jose State will be represented in the finals by one entry each.

scored one of the evening's biggest upsets in decisioning Wisconsin's Dick Murphy.

Only the night before, Murphy disposed of the defending national champ, Minnesota's Cody Connel. But last night Heims was in his glory. Everything he did was right. His explosive spurts in the final round gave him the points needed to earn him a razor edge, one point victory over Murphy.

Penn State's other finalist is the Brownsville Bomber, Captain Chuck Drzenovich.

After an apparently even first, the Draz unleashed all the dynamite. (Continued on page three)

Keep-Off-Grass Plan Goes Before Cabinet

Plans for a keep-off-the-grass campaign, were presented to All-College Cabinet Thursday.

Drawn up by the campus Upkeep and Safety Committee, the program calls for the erection of appropriate signs during the Spring vacation.

Committee Chairman Carlton Durling asked for complete cooperation from all students. Durling explained that additional walks are being planned which should facilitate movement from building to building.

The campaign signs were painted by Joseph DeAngelis, member of Alpha Phi Omega, service fraternity.

Hostetter Presents Plans Samuel K. Hostetter, assistant to the president in charge of business and finance, informed the committee that he will present three of the groups recommendations to the Board of Trustees. These include the installation of two walks, one from Temporary Building across Holmes Field to Osmond Laboratory, and the other paralleling Curtain Road on the south side from Benedict House to Stock Pavilion.

The third recommendation involves improvement of the parking lot to the east of Hort Woods.

Robert Gabriel, president of the School of Education Student Council, reported that the student news and dry cleaning agencies are operating in the black.

In a progress report from the public occasions committee, Chairman John Wallace pointed out the disadvantages of holding commencement ceremonies in Rec Hall and Beaver Field.

Committee Approves Anti-Clause Measure

The Senate Committee on Student Welfare yesterday approved a recommendation calling for abolishment of restrictive membership clauses in campus honorary or professional organizations by Oct. 1, 1953. Groups having such clauses after that date will be required to become inactive until the restrictive provisions are removed.

The recommendation will be submitted to the Senate for final action.

The motion was presented by Dr. Winona L. Morgan, a member of the Senate committee. Prior to the report, a survey prepared by the offices of the deans of men and women was presented. The survey indicated that two organizations on campus will be directly affected by the recommendation.

Senate Recommends The Senate proposal reads: "The Committee on Student Welfare recommends to the College Senate that on and after October 1st, 1953, no honorary or professional organization having in its constitution clauses restricting those eligible to a particular race or religion be permitted to operate as an approved college group. Any honorary or professional organizations not classified as Pennsylvania State College social fraternities existing on the campus at that time having such restrictive clauses still unremoved shall be required to become inactive until the restrictive provisions for membership can be removed."

Letters Submitted

Earlier in the meeting, letters concerning committee action on discrimination were read. Organizations submitting letters included National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Inter-Religious Council, Hillel Foundation, and Penn State Christian Association.

The Nittany Lion Roars

FOR Pat Heims, Lion 155-battler.

Heims, unseeded in the pre-tourney rankings, has been one of the major surprises of the current NCAA boxing extravaganza.

Last night he punched his way into the final round by out-punching heavily-favored Dick Murphy of Wisconsin, conqueror of last year's NCAA titleholder, Cody Connel.

A robust roar for the unheard, but a astounding, Pat Heims from the bewildered, but pleased, Lion.
