

Voting Today

V-Day is this week. Yes, Wednesday and Thursday are vote days on the campus with election of Junior and Senior Class, and All-College officers highlighting another political campaign.

THIS WILL BE an important election for both the State and Lion parties. The State party is determined to prove that its sweeping victory in the Fall elections was not a farce, while the Lion party, still smarting from the recent defeat, is working to redeem itself and make a complete revision of this election. These factors should make this one of the most closely contested struggles of the past years.

Both parties have entered the fight with vigor, and the campaigns have been extensive. Placards, posters, signs, pamphlets, social parties, and personal tours by the candidates have featured the pre-election race.

An encouraging point is that both parties have been urging all eligible students to vote, whether they vote for their respective party or not. This appears to be a good indication, since it shows that the candidates have the welfare of their fellow students at heart.

Each party has nominated an attractive array of candidates with Blair Green, State; and Robert Davis, Lion; aspirants for All-College President, leading the parade.

THE RIGHT TO VOTE is one of the cherished privileges of a democracy, and even though this is only a college election, as many as possible should vote and show their belief in this great heritage.

Forum Interest Proved

One of the most interesting of the Community Forum lectures this year was an extra-curricular affair staged late Monday night and early Tuesday morning.

A group of about 60 people followed the final Forum speaker, Robert St. John, to a downtown restaurant where the author-reporter held forth at a "bull session" that didn't break-up until after 1 a.m. Judging by the interest of his audience, the session probably would have lasted all night if the author hadn't had to catch a train in Lewistown.

Though the audience at the lecture itself was disappointingly small, the avid interest shown by this later group points up the valuable contribution Community Forum speakers have made to the campus this year. Since 1944 when the Community Forum was established to combine the activities of organizations interested in bringing speakers to the campus, students have been appreciative of the "name" speakers they have been able to see and hear.

This year's group has been a particularly noteworthy one from the standpoint of variety. Eugene Fulmer, chairman of the speaker's committee, deserves congratulations for attracting such men as Physicist Harold Urey, Military Writer Hanson Baldwin, Poet Carl Sandburg, Sociologist Ira Reid, Admiral Louis Denfeld and Author Robert St. John.

Too often there is an impression expressed that college people, students and faculty lose contact with reality and the world around them in their academic ivory towers. But the demonstration initiated by the St. John lecture Monday night and on the two other occasions he visited the College debunk this sort of thinking.

Unfortunately not many speakers are able or willing to undertake so exhaustive a feat as did St. John and it is to the credit of his audience, that given this opportunity, they responded so enthusiastically.

Sponsors of the program are 17 organizations from the town and campus. Co-chairman of the Forum committee are Richard Schweiker, representing the students, and Ralph McComb, College librarian, representing other organizations.
