Seniors Will Vote For Gift, Awards

Voting for the class gift and for the 11 traditional awards to the outstanding graduating men and women will take place Wednesday and Thursday in the student government room, 204 Old Main. Voting hours are from 9-5 both days.

Three gifts will be voted upon, according to James Balog, senior class president and chairman of the class gift committee.

The three articles up for consideration are an ambulance for the College Hospital; another contribution to the fund to be used to purchase a student press or the beginning of a fund for a Hall of Fame for College students, to be situated in the proposed Student Union building.

Joseph Reinheimer, senior class vice-president and chairman of the class day committee, also announced that voting for the traditional Spoon man, Barrel man, Cane man, Pipe Orator and Class Donor will also take place Wednesday and Thursday.

Cards Sent

Reinheimer also announced that postal card ballots have been sent to February graduates so that they may participate in the voting.

Voting for the outstanding women, who are identified as Bowknot girl, Class Donor, Slipper girl, Fan girl, Class Poet, and Mirror girl, will take place the same days in the individual living units.

According to Reinheimer, fifteen men have been chosen by the committee to be voted upon for the awards. They are: Ted Allen, Robert Keller, Richard Wertz, Peter Geisey, James Gehrdes, James Balog, John Senior, Thomas Morgan, Wilbert Lancaster, Robert Gabriel, Charles Beatty, Joseph Reinheimer, James MacCallum, Morton Snitzer and Richard Schweiker.

No Women's List

For the women, no list is selected. Rather, the voters will compile a list themselves for the various awards.

The Spoon man is usually the class president, but he must have a good scholastic average. The Cane man is usually chosen on the basis of popularity and leadership while the Barrel man is usually the outstanding athlete. He must also be a student leader and have a good scholastic average. The Pipe Orator and the Class Donor are outstanding campus personalities and must have high scholarship.

Engineers Hold Open House Today

Invitations to the Engineering Student Council open house, which will be held today from 2-9 p.m., have been extended to seniors from many Pennsylvania high schools and to hundreds of parents spending Mother's Day at the College.

The Penn State Engineer will be on special sale this afternoon in the lobby of EE building for the benefit of the guests.

The world's largest water tunnel and X-RAC, and ingenious computing machine are two new research devices which will be shown.

The water tunnel is now undergoing tests before being placed into operation and will be used by the Ordnance Research Laboratory of the College for testing propellers, body shapes, and auxiliaries of underwater devices through the use of powdered models.

X-RAC was developed and built by Dr. Raymond Pepinsky, research professor of physics. His students will help solve in a few minutes, problems that formerly took months to untangle.

Last Thursday, the Penn State Engineer held its annual banquet at the Allencrest. Dean Hammond of the school of engineering was the guest of honor.

La Vie for Seniors In Home Ec and Ed

Seniors in the Schools of Home Economics and Education can secure their copies of the 1950 La Vie at Student Union Monday and Tuesday, May 15 and 16.

New Infirmary Wings Approved by Trustees

Construction of two new wings to the College Infirmary has been approved by the Board of Trustees, Samuel K. Hostetter, assistant to the president in charge of business and finance, announced yesterday.

Although the cost of the project was not revealed, $500,000 was set aside in 1938 toward the construction of new hospital facilities. Hostetter disclosed that the construction of the wings will be financed by "available funds."

The funds available for the building program will be known by June 30, Hostetter said. The construction will be limited by the amount of money available, he said, but present plans call for the construction of two wings.

Preparing Plans

Architects are preparing plans for the wings and College officials have been authorized to ask for bids as soon as the drawings are ready.

Construction should start by July 1, Hostetter said. The building program should take about 15 months, he said.

Plans call for garage space for an ambulance, but no funds have been set aside for its purchase, Hostetter said. An ambulance is one of the gifts being considered by the senior class. With Dr. H. H. Glenn, director of the College Health Service, out of town yesterday, details on the additions to the present facilities could not be obtained.

The "inadequate facilities" of the health service drew a blast from Peter Geisey, retired IFC president, in February. Both the Infirmary and the Dispensary facilities drew criticism from Geisey during a meeting of All-College Cabinet.

Several times during the past semester, he charged, students with temperatures as high as 102 had been sent back to their dormitory rooms because of the shortage of beds.

Charges Backed

Geisey's charges were backed up by a Cabinet committee headed by Michael Cantwell. The committee's report supported Geisey's charges, but disclosed that plans had been made to enlarge the facilities. Cantwell's report was made several days before the original approval of the construction plans by the trustees March 30.

The Infirmary was constructed in 1929 when enrollment at the College was 6700. Present enrollment is more than 10,000. The Infirmary has a 27-bed capacity.

Crowning of May Queen Highlights Activities Today

College Orchestra Gives Program Of Modern Music

When the College Symphony Orchestra gives its annual Spring concert tomorrow at 3 p.m. in Schwab Auditorium, it will initiate a new policy of including modern American composers in its programs.

Representatives of this modern group in tomorrow's program are Deems Taylor and Arthur Benjamin. Their work will contrast with the more traditional composers of the earlier schools, whose compositions occupy the bulk of the concert. Taylor's "Dedications" from "Through the Looking Glass" and Benjamin's "Jamaican Rhumba" are the pieces scheduled.

Another major change from former orchestra practices is being initiated this year with the playing of two concerts in a single season. The orchestra's first performance this year was its short concert on Jan. 20. From now on, Theodore F. Karhan, conductor, said, the orchestra will schedule two or even three performances each season.

Traditional Program

Tomorrow's concert is the orchestra's traditional spring program, always played on Mother's Day. A large attendance is expected since many students with parents visiting this weekend will probably take them to the concert.

Women's Honorary Initiates Eight, Elects Officers

Janet Rosen was elected president of Mortar Board, national senior women's honorary, at a meeting Thursday night. Other officers of next year's group are Audrey Brua, vice-president; Bettina de Palma, secretary; Mary Ellen Grube, treasurer; Anne Forrest, historian; and Gay Brunner, editor.

Eight new members were initiated into the honorary. They are Audrey Brua, Gay Brunner, Bettina de Palma, Rose Eifert, Anne Forrest, Mary Ellen Grube, Janet Rosen, and Barbara Sprengle.

This year there were nine Mortar Board women, headed by Ruth Lehman.

The eight women were tapped early last week and were chosen on the basis of service, leadership, and scholarship. All have over a 2 all-college average.

Mortar Board was founded in 1918 and now has 84 chapters and approximately 17,000 members.

Home Ec Building Opened for Guests

Students and their parents will have the opportunity to meet the members of the Home Economics faculty at an open house and tea to be held today from 2 to 4 p.m. in the living center of the Home Economics Building.

All the rooms in the building will be open for inspection. Hostesses will greet visitors at the door and will conduct them through the rooms.

Dean of the Home Economics School, Grace Henderson, and Assistant Dean, Delpha Wiesen-danger, will pour for the tea.

This affair is held each year in conjunction with the May Day celebrations to give students and their parents an opportunity to get better acquainted with the school.

Milholland Has No Comment

Charges that he opposed the selection of Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower as president of the College have drawn a terse "no comment" reply from James Milholland, president of the Board of Trustees.

The charges were leveled against Milholland by an "independent" alumni group which opposes the re-election of Milholland, J. L. Mauthe, and Milton Fritzsche. The "independents" are urging the election of David H. Stewart, J. Kenneth Stern, and John A. Wood, while a "Committee of 90" is backing Milholland and the other incumbents.

Asked to comment on the claims made against him by the "independents," Milholland wired from Pittsburgh, "I have no comment to make."

Art Exhibit Ends

The Combined Arts exhibit in the second floor lounge of Old Main will continue until tomorrow night.

Murals painted on the walls of the Temporary Classroom Building by students in art education are also on exhibit. The murals decorate corridors of the building and also walls in Room 136.

Demonstrations Climax Dairy exposition Today

Climaxing the "Silver Anniversary" of the College Dairy Exposition today is a full day of events, including tours, contests, and a banquet.

Beginning in the livestock pavilion at 1 o'clock will be a series of fitting and showing contests and special events. Professors from all departments will demonstrate their skill in a milking contest. Also a group of coed milk maids will be featured in a milking contest.

A record number of seventy students are enrolled in the six classes of livestock production events. This year a new class of 16 to 18 month old heifers are expected to offer competition.

All judging will be based on the fitting and showing ability of the student handlers.

Molds on Display

Prize-winning ice cream molds will also be on display. These molds of scenes, objects and designs were judged earlier in the week.

Spectators will have student conducted tours through the newly-equipped dairy plant.

Several hundred dollars worth of merchandise, trophies, and cash prizes will be awarded to the winners of the show.

These prizes will be given at the Dairy Exposition banquet this evening. Principle speaker will be

May Day Festival To Include Teas, Coronation Ball

The crowning of Loraine Stotler, May Queen, will be the highlight of the May Day activities today. She and her court will appear on Holmes Field at 4:30 as part of the annual May Day Festival. In case of rain, the ceremony will be held in Recreation Hall.

Beginning the activities of the day are the Open Houses which are being held in all the women's dormitories from 2 to 3:30 o'clock today. During this time, visitors may inspect the women's rooms. Guides will be stationed in the dormitories.

From 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock, the women's dormitories will hold teas for visiting parents. Town women may bring parents to any of the teas.

To complete the afternoon, the May Day Festival will be held on Holmes Field at 4:30.

Coronation Ball, sponsored by WSGA, will top off the day's affairs. The informal dance is from 9 to 12 o'clock tonight at Recreation Hall. The dance is a family affair, with card tables set up for those who wish to play bridge or canasta. Parents are admitted free.

Magill Music

Gene Magill's orchestra is providing the music. Tickets at $1.50 per couple and are available at Recreation Hall. Refreshments will be served.
