

Keep Abreast Of Air Age, Says UNESCO Director

Dr. John Ferbee, noted lecturer and director of Air Education for UNESCO, declared that few people in the United States realize the close proximity of one part of the globe to the other as he spoke at Friday's Pennsylvania Workshop lecture.

been filled for the production ex-aleck air cadet. Numerous letters from Taylor went unanswered until, in desperation Hart sent for him. Once in New York, Don had no trouble convincing Hart that he was the right man for the part. Taylor was so convincing in his role that when the stage play was rewritten for Hollywood, his part was greatly built up. It was while with the stage company that Don met his wife. She was the leading lady, Phyllis Avery.

Neusbaum Helps

F. S. Neusbaum, administrative head of the College's motion picture and recording studio, is one of the men who has helped the rising actor. It was Neusbaum who directed Don in the production of "The Shrew" and brought the scouts to one of the rehearsals.

The Taylor's live a quiet family life in Hollywood. Neusbaum states. Their home might well be mistaken for that of a college professor. By Hollywood standards, it is very modest. They have two young children, and Mrs. Taylor has given up her career to care for them.

"A town without an airport will soon be like a town without a highway leading into it," he said. Illustrating his statement that air travel narrows the gap between world centers, Dr. Ferbee said, "I awoke this morning in Milwaukee and already I have been to Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, and Harrisburg before arriving here."

"New Highways"

He described transportation as the highway of civilization, and said, "When most of us were born, two-thirds of the world had not been opened to land or sea transportation. Now in our lifetime, the airplane has opened this vast territory." Dr. Ferbee maintained that the air age will change many things. He claimed that it has already switched our businessmen's viewpoint of dealing on a national scale to that of an international one.

He called on the people of the United States to expand their minds in order to match the physical expansion of airplanes and warned, "If we do not — then we will fall behind the rest of the world."

Aside from "Winged Victory," Taylor's best performance is his present role of the bridegroom, in "The Father of the Bride," Neusbaum believes.

State College Inaccessible, Says Ferbee

Dr. John Ferbee, world traveler who spoke at the Pennsylvania Workshop Friday, had some comments about air travel to and from State College.

"Last fall," Dr. Ferbee said, "I spent several days in the middle of the Arabian desert where 3,000 American families were living. At the end of my tour, I was taken to a modern airport where my guide said, 'from here we have daily commuting service to New York.'"

Touching on the difficulty he had in flying into State College, Dr. Ferbee said, "You can go to Arabia faster than you can get into State College."

4b. Unclassified and special summer sessions students obtain approval from the Director of the Summer Sessions at Section 3U.

5. Present approved application-registration forms and obtain class admission cards at Section 4.

6. Proceed to Section 5, main floor, Recreation Hall, to complete registration as outlined under "If You Have Pre-Registered."

'Color' Lecture Due Tomorrow

A demonstration-lecture, "Color," will be presented by Kenneth V. Manning, associate professor of physics, in 117 Osmond Laboratory at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

Demonstrating all phases of color and color mixtures, the lecture is sponsored by the department of physics and is open to the public.

Another demonstration-lecture on mechanics, "Seeing Is Believing" by Fred Tracy, instructor in physics, will be presented the same time and place the following Wednesday.

never solve this thing. He replied:

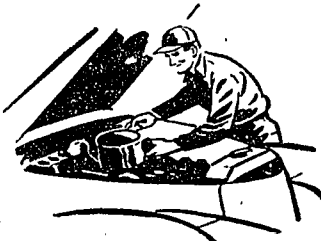

"So let us fling ourselves at it."

Speaking on the delation of television to current problems, Dr. Clausen believes that there is a need for an international medium of understanding, "and my life is absorbed in a whistful determination to manage it."

"Television presents a new possibility for universal broadcasting of international problems. Here the claims of other nations can be interpreted against the claims of the United States."
