

'No Moola ($) No Boola' Rogel Answers Steelers

By RAY KOEHLER
Collegian Sports Editor

An anxious Franny Rogel is not straying very far away from a telephone these days as he awaits the word that will send him into action for the Pittsburgh Steelers this fall in the National Professional Football League. But that word—said to involve a high four-figured sum has been mighty hesitant in coming.

Still playing the part of a poker-faced chessman waiting for his opponent's next move, Rogel remains adamant in his decision not to pursue a football career in professional circles unless his request for a salary increase is met by the Steelers.

Reliable estimates have the Steeler front office willing to go up to $5000, whereas the Nittany star from 1946 through '49 is reported to be demanding $6000 smackers. However, calm he appears on the surface, Punchy, nevertheless, admits that he's like a horse balking at the reins at the thought of a football season approaching without him playing.

Last week Rogel met with the club's General Manager, John D. Holahan with no success. Says Franny:

"I was willing to talk business, but they wouldn't meet my price and I am certainly not going down to theirs."

Regardless of the Steeler pleas, Rogel remained unconvinced. He is determined to receive a price he feels—as one of the leading backfield men in the East for the past three years—he has the right to demand.

Meanwhile, matters are coming to a head in the jittery Steeler camp where Johnny Papach, Coach Johnny Michelosen's full-back sparkplug last year, still has not inked his signature to a Pittsburgh contract. So anxious appear the Western Pennsylvanians to affix Rogel's name to a contract in order to fortify themselves that they had called for another conference Saturday.

Interested in Wrestling

A few months ago it had been rumored that Rogel might possibly enter the professional wrestling ring after his graduation from Penn State's School of Physical Education. Queried on the possibility of growing a beard and dying his locks an incandescent yellow in order to follow the Entries have closed, and action is now under way in the recreation tennis and golf tournaments. Tennis pairings are posted at the tennis booth. A total of 25 entries are participating in the three net divisions.

Golf got off to a good start last week, with some of the linksmen now in the semi-final round of match play. In all, 37 golfers qualified for the event.

Sherm Fogg, tennis coach, pulled the upset of the tourney when he topped Ted Robertson, number two man of the varsity golf team, 4-3, in the opening round of match play. Robertson, tourney medalist, qualified with a 67, tying the course record.

burp circuit, Rogy answered seriously: "I still haven't given up the thought of wrestling professionally. The last thing I heard was from my high school coach. Evidently the syndicate was down from Pittsburgh to see him—but they haven't contacted me yet."
