Crowded Streets

Even though many students live in town, most Penn Staters live in an almost complete vacuum as far as borough affairs are concerned—even those affairs which affect students directly.

TAKE, FOR EXAMPLE, the parking situation. We became curious the other day when one of our friends was given a $5.50 ticket by a member of the local gendarmerie for parking against traffic. Thinking that the $2 fine plus $3.50 in costs was a rather large hunk of cash to pay for a parking violation, we did a little investigation.

We learned that parking against traffic is a state offense and that the state receives the fine money. The costs, which are prescribed by state law and must be levied by the borough, go into general borough funds. Neither the police officer nor a magistrate receives any of the money.

A major reason for the borough drive to enforce traffic regulations is the difficult parking problem, aggravated by the number of student-owned cars parked on borough streets. The over-crowded situation is particularly acute in the fraternity area, where there is a high population density. Off-street parking facilities are extremely low, and efforts of the borough to persuade owners of vacant lots to allow parking on their lots largely has proved unsuccessful.

HOWEVER, steps to alleviate the parking situation are being taken by the borough, which has established a parking authority for this purpose. Unfortunately, no real solution to the problem, which has been widely studied by local authorities, is to be expected for at least a year.

Best solution, of course, is off-street parking supported by the borough on a non-profit basis. Inasmuch as students are affected, the College should take interest in the authority's work and should cooperate with it.

Thanks For AIM

Last Saturday the Association of Independent Men sponsored the first of what promises to be a popular series of post-game dances. The Recreation Hall floor held a crowd the proportions of which are usually seen only at "big dances."

AT THIS first dance students heard an outstanding campus orchestra, Ray Evert's Artists in Melody, that too sponsored by AIM.

Last Spring AIM, realizing the need for Saturday night entertainment, backed several partially successful dances. Enthusiasm, however, was not great and attendance was low.

Now, the post-game dance apparently has hit its stride. For this, AIM deserves many thanks.

AIM has provided an excellent solution for that old State College problem of what to do on Saturday night.

Laughing Coeds

With hatmen and freshman men engaged in a total war, which involves such small details as fruit-throwing at the Georgetown game, and the battering down of Thompson Hall before the dormitory has even been completed, the College seems to have forgotten that there are over 250 freshman women on campus who have yet to commit a major violation of freshman customs.

NO ONE supposes the freshman women like wearing green ribbons, struggling with name-cards, and being dateless. But neither has the head of women's customs board been hung in effigy as a means of retaliation.

While a relatively small group of some hatmen with homicidal tendencies and some freshman men who just can't take it heap wood on the fire to make the uprising hotter than it is, the coeds, because of the conduct of the freshman women, are just sitting back. And laughing.

TO THE EDITOR: I see that the total enrollment now is 11,059, and of those 7,284 are men, and 2129 women. If I'm one of the remaining 1646 can you tell me what I am? My parents might like to know.

The presidents and, on the floors where there are two advisers, the vice-presidents will represent their respective floors on the West dorm council.

Draftees Insured Absence Leaves

The Board of Trustees has approved a policy which will protect those College employees' positions who enter active armed services by granting them a leave of absence.

President Milton S. Eisenhower explained that the leave of absence without a salary will continue until June 30 following the departure of the employee. This leave can be renewed yearly for the duration of his military service.

He emphasized that this leave of absence will be added to any length of College service credit that an employee may have. If the employee desires to return to the College at the end of his military service, the administration will make every effort to return him to his original position or an equivalent.

This policy, it was explained, will apply to all College employees and includes both those subject to selective service and volunteers.

Milt, Jr. Is Editor

Milton S. Eisenhower, son of President Eisenhower, has been named sports editor of the 1951 Royal Purple, yearbook at the Kansas State College.
