STATE COLLEGE, PA., WEDNESDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 4, 1950

Brothers' Reunion To Be Sidelight Of Inauguration

The inauguration of President Milton S. Eisenhower tomorrow also will mark the reunion of four of the five Eisenhower brothers and their families. The brothers have been close knit, and manage a reunion almost every year.

General and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Mr. and Mrs. Earl D. Eisenhower, and Edgar N. Eisenhower will be among the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Eisenhower will not attend because of illness in his firm.

General Eisenhower will journey from Columbia university, where the former Supreme Allied commander is now president. Dwight Eisenhower was graduated from West Point in 1915, and served as Allied commander in Europe during World War II. From November, 1945, until February, 1948, he was chief of staff of the United States Army.

Earl D. Eisenhower is an electrical engineer with the West Penn Power company at Charleroi, Pa. He was graduated from the University of Washington, Seattle. Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower's two children, Earl Jr. and Kathryn, will accompany them from Charleroi.

Edgar N. Eisenhower has his own law firm at Tacoma, Wash. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan and also took his legal training there. He is a widower with two married children, Jack and Janis.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Eisenhower will not attend the ceremonies. He is vice-president of the Commerce Trust company in Kansas City, Mo. He and his wife have one married daughter.

Eisenhower Made Education Strides

President Milton S. Eisenhower's term of office at Kansas State college shows a record of progressive thinking and a strong interest in student affairs.

He returned to his alma mater as president in September, 1943, and proceeded to set up four "comprehensive courses": "Man and the Physical World," "Man and the Social World," "Biology in Relation to Man," and "Man and the Cultural World."

Students at Kansas State were required to take at least three of these courses which did not fall under their major subjects.

One of the first things he remarked upon after becoming connected with Penn State was the unique form of student government. While at Kansas State, he created the office of dean of student's efforts, whose duty it was to organize extra-curricular activities of the student body.

Students were represented on nearly all policy-making committees at Kansas State, and the student council had wide power over student affairs.

On the faculty side, President Eisenhower banded almost the entire faculty together in a committee to develop a philosophy of education for college and study courses, with an eye toward revision of the system. He met weekly with the heads of the various groups into which the central committee had been split.

Kansas State, under President Eisenhower's regime, engaged in the largest building program in the history of the school, and faculty salaries were raised about 75 per cent.

Eisenhower's Honorary Degrees Conferred By Four Colleges

Milton S. Eisenhower, who will be inaugurated as the 11th President of the College tomorrow, comes to Penn State bearing honorary doctors degrees from four colleges. He also is a member of five honorary, scholastic, social, and service organizations.

President Eisenhower received an honorary doctor of law degree from Wichita University in 1944; an honorary doctor of science degree from Colorado State college in 1945; and honorary doctor of humane letters degree from the University of Nebraska in 1949; and an honorary doctor of science degree from Temple university at the same time his brother, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, received an honorary degree early this year.

He is a member of Sigma Delta

Chi, national professional journalistic society, and Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society. His social fraternity is Sigma Alpha Epsilon, which has a local chapter at the College.

President Eisenhower also is a member of the Rotary club, a national service organization, and was chosen for membership in the Kansas Academy of Science.

15,000 Expected To View Beaver Field Ceremonies

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower will be inaugurated as the 11th president of the College tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in ceremonies at Beaver Field.

The program will open tonight with a reception at White hall at 8:30 o'clock in honor of President and Mrs. Eisenhower. Attendance is by invitation only. Guests will be delegates to the inauguration and other dignitaries.

Delegates Attend

Approximately 1000 persons are expected to attend the affair tonight. Colleges and universities throughout the country will send 258 representatives, in most cases their president, chancellor or provost. Learned and education organizations will send 28 delegates. Other guests will be representatives of the borough of State College, state officials, the alumni and delegates from the College, and the student body.

15,000 Expected

Arrangements have been made for handling the crowd of about 15,000 expected to attend the inauguration ceremonies tomorrow.

For students, the 10, 11 and 1 o'clock classes have been cancelled so that they may attend.

For delegates, a special parking lot east of the Nittany Lion inn has been built to hold the overflow from the other parking lots on the campus. The lot will be strictly reserved for visiting guests.

Guests at the reception tonight at White Hall for President and Mrs. Eisenhower will find facilities for checking coats and wraps at the northeast entrance of White hall, the door nearest Simmons dormitory.

Faculty and students of the College have been asked by College authorities to keep the campus clear of cars all day Wednesday and Thursday so that the flow of out-of-town traffic will move quickly.

Reporters Cover Event

Heavy coverage by newspapers, news services, radio and television has also been arranged.

Reporters from the New York Times, the New York Herald-Tribune, the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Harrisburg Evening News, Patriot and Sunday News, the Centre Daily Times, the Williamsport Gazette, Bulletin, and Sun, and the Altoona Mirror and Tribune already have made arrangements to cover.

News pictures will be taken by Associated Press wirephoto service and the Acme Telephoto service.

Paramount News will have a cameraman on the scene and Mutual Television Newsreel of the Air and Teleneews of New York (Continued on page two)

President Has Career As Editor, Educator, Writer

Dr. Milton Stover Eisenhower, the 11th President of the College, brings with him to Penn State a long and distinguished career as an educator, writer, editor, and government official.

Dr. Eisenhower, who assumed his position in July following announcement of his appointment Jan. 21, celebrated his 51st birthday anniversary Sept. 15.

Prior to coming to Penn State, President Eisenhower was president of Kansas State college, Manhattan, Kas. His seven-year administration there was marked by a tremendous growth in the size of the college and of its importance among the nation's educational institutions.

Worked In OWI

Prior to accepting the appointment as president of Kansas State in 1943, President Eisenhower was an associate director of the Office of War Information. In 1942, shortly after the Allied invasion of North Africa, President Franklin D. Roosevelt sent him on a special mission to Algeria to study refugee and relocation problems. He was also chairman of the United States commission for UNESCO.

President Eisenhower's wartime government service highlighted a long career as a public servant. From 1924 to 1926, he was American vice-consul in Edinburgh, Scotland. In July, 1926, he became an assistant secretary of agriculture, and in 1928 he was named director of information for the Department of Agriculture.

He served as director of information until January, 1941. From 1937 to 1941 he also served as coordinator of the Department of Agriculture's land use program. In March, 1942, he was appointed president of the War Relocation authority and directed the relocation of Japanese-Americans evacuated from the Pacific Coast.

Born In Kansas

Born in Abilene, Kas., in 1899, he was graduated from Kansas State in 1924 with a bachelor of science degree in industrial journalism and printing. He served as city editor of the Abilene Daily Reflector in 1918 and from 1920 to 1921. Later he taught journalism at his alma mater before assuming his post in Scotland.

Dr. Eisenhower is married to the former Helen Eakin, of Manhattan, Kas. The Eisenhower's have two children, Milton Stover Jr., 20, a journalism senior at Kansas State, and Ruth Eakin, 12. He is the author of numerous federal bulletins and leaflets, co-author of the book, The United States Department of Agriculture: Its Structure and Function, and a contributor to leading magazines, and yearbooks.

Inauguration Issue

Today's Collegian is a special issue, largely devoted to tomorrow's inauguration ceremonies for President Milton S. Eisenhower. It is intended as a souvenir of the event.

Today . . .

The Nittany Lion Roars

FOR the 11th President of Penn State, Milton S. Eisenhower, who will don the robes of office at inauguration ceremonies tomorrow, Leo growls a welcome to the 15,000 well-wishers who will attend.

Through the old beast's mind runs the memory of truly great names of the past—Pugh, Atherton, Sparks, Hetzel—and he thunders out his pride in the school's fine past and his faith in its finer future under the administration of the new president.
