

UN Forces Set To Cross 38th

SEOUL — More than 175,000 United Nations troops are poised in readiness awaiting General MacArthur's expected order to cross the 38th parallel to end North Korean resistance.

Meanwhile, about 20,000 South Korean troops who have crossed the parallel have run into tough resistance 50 miles south of the major UN objective, Wonson. Elements of the third South Korean

Men Debaters To Meet Army

Penn State men debaters will open their season at West Point tomorrow at 7:30 o'clock against the Army debater team.

Those making the trip are Marlin Brenner, debate captain; Clair George, varsity debater; and J. F. O'Brien, member of the College Speech department and debate coach.

The topic for all debates this season is—"Resolved: That the non-communist nations of one world should form a separate world organization." Penn State will argue the negative in tomorrow's contest.

Brenner was a member of the team that tied for Grand National championship honors at Fredricksburg, Va., last year. He was a finalist in the Grand National extemporaneous speaking contest and was the partner of Clair George at the Washington and Jefferson tournament in which they were undefeated. His record last year was twelve wins and one loss.

George is this year's Grand National champion after dinner speaker. He was a member of the Grand National championship and Mount Mercy tournament teams, and on Washington and Jefferson tournament's cup-winning team.

Coach O'Brien said, "The Army debate team is rated as strongly as their football team and is considered one of the best teams in the East."

Stoddard, Davis

Davis Speaks For Students Davis pledged the interest, support and cooperation of the student body to President Eisenhower.

He stressed the importance of the land-grant institutions and hoped that the youthful enthusiasm to be found at Penn State would be combined with the wisdom of President Eisenhower to help the College with her growing pains.

In discussing the purpose of Penn State, Davis said, "The College should be a center of scientific and artistic achievement which answers the commonwealth's need for a well-balanced education for young people and adults."

Milholland Portrait Given To College

The Board of Trustees of the College at a luncheon yesterday honored James Milholland, president of the board, when it presented an oil portrait of Milholland to the College.

The presentation was made by George H. Deike, of Pittsburgh, vice-president of the Board. President Milton S. Eisenhower accepted the portrait for the College.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia university, spoke briefly.

The portrait is the work of Malcolm S. Purcell, of Washington, Pa.

division fought through barbed wire and mined fields to capture Changjon, 63 miles north of the 38th parallel.

North Korean troops are now attempting to regroup their troops which Army intelligence reports to be less than three full divisions.

Reds Admit Failure

VIENNA — Austrian communists admitted today that their attempted general strike was a failure. The Reds called off their strike because of what they called "Western pressure."

The Russian-controlled radio in Vienna announced the impossibility of obtaining a nation-wide general strike, but threatened, "The strike was not without result. Our experience in fighting, and our fighting unity has been strengthened. Our fight has not ended."

Violence was restricted to the Russian zone of the nation. Vienna's five main railroads were barricaded, but Russian officials allowed no interference with Allied military trains.

UN Condemns 3 Nations

LAKE SUCCESS—Bulgaria, Hungary, and Romania were condemned today by a special political committee of the United Nations. The three countries were called willful violators of peace treaty promises in that they failed to safeguard human rights and freedoms.

Duff, Duncan —

Faculty Pleased Turning to President Eisenhower, Duncan said, "Today is your day, the faculty was well-pleased with your appointment to the presidency and welcomes you."

Duncan stated that President Eisenhower had those qualities of leadership which the College needs and that the new president would strengthen democracy with his administration of the campus. He also said that President Eisenhower would recognize the part that the faculty has to play at Penn State.

Duncan gave credit to James Milholland, president of the Board of Trustees and former acting president of the College, for competent leadership during the time when Penn State was without a regular president.

He said that the interim between presidents gave the trustees time to choose a capable successor to President Hetzel. Duncan also said that Milholland was backed by assistants who did a fine job.

The Penn State Christian association will hold a cabin party for sophomores at Watts lodge this weekend.

The group will leave early tomorrow afternoon from behind Old Main and will return to the campus before noon Sunday.

Eisenhower Says Education Will Cure World's Troubles

Cure for the world's trouble is more—not less—education, President Milton S. Eisenhower told newsmen in a press conference yesterday afternoon.

He and three of his four brothers chatted amiably on the lawn at the presidential mansion before the brothers—Dwight, Earl and Edgar—left for a game of golf on the College course. Together since Tuesday, the brothers have made the inauguration ceremonies the occasion for their annual reunion.

The Penn State president called for more thinking along lines of world education and understanding.

Military Service Needed

He said he thought some sort of national military service program probably would be needed for national defense, but that he hoped a system would be worked out which would not weaken the nation's educational system.

Brother Dwight, former commander of Allied World War II forces in Europe, said he was not wishing Penn State "too good luck" in the football game with Army tomorrow. He said he was "impressed" more by his brother's inauguration here than by his own two years ago at Columbia university, where he now is president. He said that it was more fun sitting through an inauguration as a spectator.

Hillel To Hold Dance Recital

Katya Delakova and Fred Berk, internationally known dancers will appear in a dance recital sponsored by Hillel foundation in the auditorium of the Temporary Union building at 7:30 p.m. next Wednesday.

The recital will be on Jewish themes from the Bible, dances of Israel, and traditional Jewish character dances. At the close of the recital they will lead the audience in folk dancing. The public is invited and there will be no admission charge.

Material which they have collected on Jewish dances has been published in two books entitled "Jewish Folk Dances" and "Dances of Palestine."

Drive Needed, President Says

(Continued from page one) ently bad economic conditions. The program also should include a firmer support of the United Nations so that disputes which often arise among nations can be kept from breaking into hostilities.

"And it must include power—power which the kindly people of the world may use to enforce peace upon those who would violate it," he declared.

The president continued, saying that he hoped that the United Nations, after the present conflict in Korea was over, would maintain an international police force to put down aggression wherever it might occur.

Educational Aspect

Moving into the educational aspect of today, President Eisenhower said, "I am convinced that democracy, in the face of ever-growing complexity, can be sustained only with an ever-rising level of education and understanding among all people."

"Public education has never quite caught up with the demand made upon it," President Eisenhower said, "Too few and poorly paid teachers, working in under-equipped classrooms and laboratories that bulge with too many students, has been a prevailing condition of our educational endeavor, from nursery school to university, throughout much of our history."

According to President Eisenhower, one of the blessings of our present situation, which tortured times have placed the American educational system in the land-grant college.

Five Points Stressed

President Eisenhower stressed five points which the College must achieve in making its contribution: specialized training for the making of a living or a home; an understanding of all broad fields of knowledge; competence in communication; the ability to make critical judgment; and an abiding commitment to the democratic way of life.

"Here this morning I have the high privilege of dedicating myself to the service of the people of the commonwealth," the new president concluded.

Davis Urges Students To Buy Concert Tickets

All-College president Robert Davis yesterday urged students to purchase tickets for the Community Concert Series.

"To date," Davis said, "the townspeople and faculty have out-bought the students by three to one. There are many good seats available at $6 for the four program series—a value students cannot afford to miss."

Tickets can be purchased from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. today and until noon tomorrow in 204 Old Main.
